SOUTH AMERICAN ARMIES FIGHT FIERCE 24-HOUR BATTLE

THREATENED SPLIT IN "BLOODY GROUPS"

JAPANESE PREPARE FOR BIG DEMONSTRATION

CRISIS IS ANTICIPATED IN SHANGHAI

(From Our Own Correspondent).

Shanghai, Yesterday.

A split is threatened among the independent societies operating under various titles of "Bloody Groups," following the attempt of the original "Bloody Group for the Extermination of Traitors" to merge with another patriotic society recently organised to intimidate merchants dealing in Japanese goods.

Meanwhile, for unaccountable reasons, the bomb throwing programme of the terrorist organisations remains suspended for a fortnight.

Japanese naval and Consular authorities, however, in no wise reassured by the restless quiet, are adopting special precautionary measures for the next few days to guard against possible outbreaks of inter-factional strife. Trouble is expected in Shanghai when Tokyo officially recognises the status of the newly-formed Manchukuo state. Mass demonstrations are altogether likely and the city is most apprehensive.

The atmosphere is affecting business adversely and the Stock Exchange and real estate are practically lifeless.

PROPOSALS FOR EUROPE TRADE PACTS

Smaller Powers Are Discouraged.

(Special to the Sunday Herald).

Stresa, Yesterday. Having been informed by the French spokesman that further loans from France were out of the question, the delegates to the Economic Conference here, representing the lesser mid-European powers, have embarked upon a quest for alternative ameliorations, though not without considerable friction.

Proposals have been lodged with France and Italy aiming at a facilitation of grain exchange. This is augmented by the German plan involving assistance for Bulgaria, Roumania, Yugoslavia and Hungary at the hands of Germany, Italy, France and Austria. Tending what aid it can. But the German proposal does not find favour in Polish eyes, for that country is left out in the cold, and knocking at the door, indignantly.

Another outstanding fact is that such a pact as suggested by Berlin's representative would implement commercial agreements already existing between Germany, Hungary and Roumania, and benefit the former nation most largely. It appears to some observers that the Conference is deteriorating, in some of its phases, to a trade-grabbing enterprise on the part of several of the more hard-pressed nations concerned.

While the big powers are trying to assimilate their ideas, the smaller, agrarian states met privately to consider the situation, but finally, with a gesture of hopelessness, they decided to leave everything to their big neighbours, and trust in their rivalry to strike a good bargain. — Reuter.

Borderers Swimming Sports

"A" COMPANY WIN THE SHIELD.

Mrs. Raikes Presents Prizes.

VERY CLOSE CONTEST.

A "Company won the South Wales Borderers Swimming Sports in the Y.M.C.A. Bath yesterday when they returned an aggregate total of 34 points as compared with the 32 points returned by both "B" and "C" Companies. The Headquarters Wing (31) were fourth and "D" Company (M.G.) were last with 21 points.

At the conclusion of the aquatic events Mrs. Raikes, wife of Lt.-Col. G. T. Raikes, D.S.O. officer Commanding the 1st Battalion, presented the Inter-Company Shield to "A" Company, who proved worthy winners of a close contest.

Pte. W. J. Campbell, who won the Harbour Swim on Wednesday in record time added valuable points to "C" Company's tally, but he lacked the support to send his company to the front.

The following were the full results:

Inter Company Relay.

1—"B" Company. Pte. Woods; Pte. Harries (88); Pte. McCarthy (50); L/C. Woodman; Pte. Marsh; and Pte. Jones (39).

2—"A" Company. Lieut. A. G. Martin; Pte. Gilmore; Pte. Wallace; L/C. Vincent; Pte. Jones (85); and Cpl. Morgan (39).

3—"C" Company. Lt. J. C. Richardson; Pte. Campbell; Cpl. Shaw; L/C. Williams (74); L/C. Scammell; and Pte. Jones (44).

EXPLOSION'S DEATH TOLL IS MOUNTING

39 Dead And 58 Gravely Injured.

NEW YORK TRAGEDY.

New York, Yesterday. The list of casualties in the disaster which overtook the river ferry, "Observation," early this morning, has shocked the whole city. There are 39 known dead and 58 gravely injured, while others, whose number is not definitely known, are still missing and may never be found.

Three separate inquiries have been instituted to discover the cause of the explosion on the aged vessel, which was carrying some 200 working men to work on the new State Penitentiary site. The majority of survivors blame the 24-year-old boilers for the blast which shattered the hull of the ferry and sank her, with terrible loss of life, in a few seconds.

A Federal examination of a criminal nature has been commenced, while the County Police and the Iron Workers' Union are busily engaged on their own investigations. The Union alleges that the vessel, which was chartered by the City as a ferry, was "unseaworthy and undermanned."

There have been no arrest in connection with the tragedy, but Captain Forsyth, who is only 24 years of age, is under detention in the hospital where he lies injured, pending questioning regarding the explosion. His father, aged 66 years, who piloted the ferry, is among the dead.

A Tragic Spot. There is a strange coincidence in the tragic sinking of the crowded ferryboat, "Observation," on the very spot that the ill-fated "General Slocum" met her sudden end with awful loss of life, in 1904.

Late to-day, after boats of all sorts had searched the harbour waters for bodies, and the injured all had been rushed to hospitals, it was estimated that the death toll in the mysterious explosion aboard the "Observation" might reach 100.

Many casualties who were brought to emergency wards in the city's hospitals have no chance of recovering. Many are terribly mangled and some so badly shocked that it is doubtful if they will ever regain consciousness. They suffer from grave concussion, due to the force of the blast which blew the vessel on which they were travelling literally to a thousand fragments.

U.S. CONCERN AT GERMAN REPARATIONS' DELAY.

(Special to the Sunday Herald).

Washington, Yesterday. A bulletin dealing with the postponement of payment of the German reparations due to America will be issued shortly by the Secretary of State, Mr. Ogden Mills, it was learned to-day.

There is concern in the capital over the position. The sums due were arranged as compromise payments, representing much larger amounts, and total 12,500,000 marks for the cost of the American Army of Occupation and 20,400,000 war claims by citizens against Germany. — Reuter.

HINDENBURG WILL HEAR COALITION PLANS.

Parities Seek Agreement.

(Special to the Sunday Herald).

Berlin, Yesterday.

President von Hindenburg has agreed to receive the Parliamentary leaders of the Nazi, Centre and Bavarian People's Party next week, in order to hear from them a fuller statement of their wishes as to the formation of a new Cabinet. Meanwhile, these parties are attempting to reach an agreement which will effect a sort of coalition, and thus give them full control of the Reichstag. — Reuter.

MANCHUKUO CRISIS

Japan's Recognition On September 14.

REPERCUSSIONS FEARED.

London Acknowledges The Possibility Of War.

Tokyo, Yesterday.

The Prime Minister and Minister of Foreign Affairs to-day submitted for the perusal of the Emperor a draft treaty for the recognition of the new state, Manchukuo. His Imperial Majesty referred the draft to the Privy Council, which body is expected to complete its deliberations in the matter on September 13. The recognition of Manchukuo will be announced on the following day, September 14.

London Apprehensive.

While it is recognised that two coming events — the publication of the Japan-Manchukuo Treaty and the Lytton Report — will constitute a major crisis in the Far East, responsible British opinion tends to await definite contents of the Lytton Report, regarding the parts of it which leaked out as misleading and not informing to public opinion.

The "Financial News," however, remarks that enough is already known to indicate that the two documents will be mutually exclusive, which fundamental opposition must produce deeply

BIG RANSOM ASKED FOR BRITISHERS

Contact With Bandits In North Wilds.

MANCHUKUO RESPONSIBLE.

Dairen, Yesterday.

The captors of Mrs. Murill Pawley and Mr. Charles Corkran, are demanding a ransom of $250,000 which the British Consul at Newchwang says Manchukuo, which is responsible for peace and order, should pay. — Reuter.

Father Is Hopeful.

Newchwang, Yesterday. A medical missionary, Doctor Phillips, the father of Mrs. Pawley, who, with a gentleman companion, was captured by bandits on the Mukden race course, is confident that he has made the first step towards contact with the kidnappers through former patients of his. However, he requests that the name of the intermediaries and the location of the prisoners be withheld.

In case the captives are endangered, the British authorities insist on the release being negotiated without fighting, fearing for the lives of the two. — Reuter.

A third Britisher, husband of the woman, escaped and brought news of the distressing situation. Japanese troops are believed to have surrounded the brigands. — Reuter.

significant decisions, either by the League of Nations and Japan or by both separately. Further, the same paper observes, the Pacific relations are almost at a deadlock and not too much importance need be attached to the continued presence in the Pacific of the United States Fleet.

But the stirrings of nationalism in China and Japan are too deep to admit of easy compromise between them. In the Autumn a crisis may well lie in a decision whether the weakness or exacerbation of nationalism is to predominate.

Whether, with difficulties in the economic background, Japan will be compelled towards or precluded from implementing her ambitious Manchurian programme, must be one of the major decisions of the year. — Reuter.

Curio-Hunters Rush To Buy Odd Trifles In Match King's Home

(Special to the Sunday Herald).

Stockholm, Yesterday. The sale of the household goods and personal trifles owned by the late Mr. Ivar Kreuger, Sweden's Match King and bankrupt wizard of finance, drew hundreds of eager curio-seekers to the once-splendid home, now bare of many of its art treasures by desperate creditors.

These people came thronging, willing to pay fantastic prices for the smallest objects, things of no use whatever and of trifling value. A pair of steel scissors, for instance, engraved with Kreuger's name, either before or after his death, fetched three guineas, Kettles, worth no more than a few shillings, sold for as many pounds.

The auctioneer was so astounded that he almost ruined his day. He stood, as the crowd bid feverishly, silent and staring, his mouth open. He could not smile for sheer amazement in this auctioneer's paradise.

"This story of depression must be all a myth," he expostulated.

The eager buyers had cleared away his large stock of trifles and were carrying them away triumphantly, watching one another jealously, but quite content. — Reuter.

BOLIVIAN OFFENSIVE TURNED TO DEFEAT

FORT BOQUERON FALLS TO PARAGUAYAN ARMS

CONFLICTING NEWS

Buenos Aires, Yesterday.

Large forces of Bolivian and Paraguayan troops have clashed in the Gran Chaco forest country along an extended front, according to despatches from Lapaz and Asuncion. The two South American nations, then, are actually at war, though neither has made a formal declaration and each denounces the other for unlawful attack.

Aeroplanes and heavy artillery participated in a 24-hour engagement around Bolivian fortress of Boqueron, which the Paraguayan forces, it is believed, have captured.

From meagre reports, it is feared that casualties on both sides have been heavy and streams of wounded are filing through the broken country behind the opposing lines to the dressing stations.

AMERICANS' RESPONSE TO CREDIT CALL

Huge Treasury Issue Is Over-subscribed.

$1,150,000,000 NEEDED.

Washington, Yesterday.

The issue of $1,150,000,000 in Treasury Notes and "Certificates of Indebtedness," for the purpose of meeting the huge, maturing American obligations in public debt, and to provide funds for the Reconstruction Corporation, has been six times over-subscribed. According to the Secretary of the Treasury, this enormous amount was realised within a few hours after the call.

The programme provides for issuance of treasury notes to the value of $750,000,000 bearing three-quarters per cent. interest and maturing in five years, and "certificates of indebtedness" for $400,000,000, bearing one and a quarter per cent. interest and maturing September 15, 1933.

This is the Treasury's second major financial operation of the present fiscal year, the first being the issue on August 1 for $865,000,000 in Treasury notes maturing in four years, which were ten times over-subscribed in one day.

The Treasury policy latterly has been one of energetic encouragement to industry. Through a general revival of confidence, it is felt, the much-desired end of depression will be reached. The first essential in such an endeavour is to provide the means of loosening funds, and this the Treasury appears to be achieving. — Reuter.

The fighting, it is reported, began at dawn yesterday when a strong column of Bolivian troops advanced out of the fortified Boqueron area, where it had been concentrating for some days. The troops were directed against the Paraguayan lines around Pozo, Valencia, where the defences were subjected to a heavy bombardment.

Heavy Losses.

The Paraguayan troops, it is stated further, succeeded in inflicting severe losses upon the necessarily exposed attacking force, met them with the bayonet and in a driving counter-attack forced the advancing force to turn into a retreat.

Following up this initial success, the Paraguayan troops hastened to harass the retreating enemy and ultimately reached Boqueron, where, according to their own despatches, they made a sudden raid and swept over the fortifications, capturing guns and large amounts of stores.

Complains Of Silence.

President Ayala of Paraguay complains to Washington of the silence of the neutral nations, but has received no communication in reply. Paraguay, he points out, has been attacked, and her relations with the League of Nations are thus embarrassed.

Bolivia, however, makes the same claim as its rival power, alleging that the Paraguayan armies mobilisation precipitated the trouble. Each side is busy denouncing the other for attacking without any formal declaration of war.

An Old Dispute.

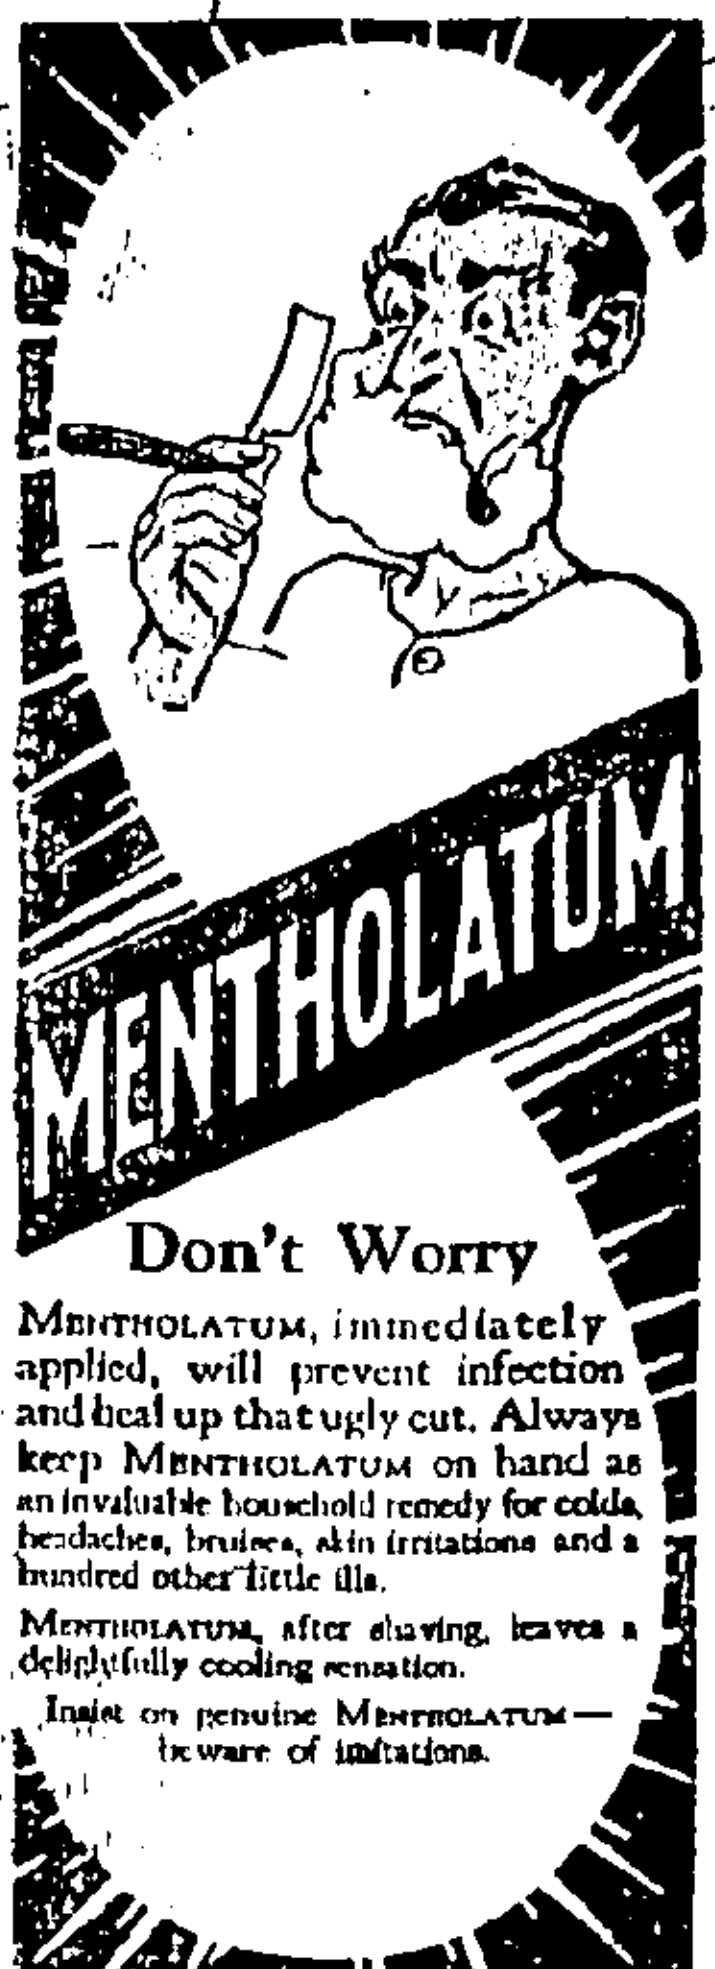

The Gran Chaco valley dispute is many years old, and resulted from the lack of definite demarcation of the frontier, following the division of the country under separate Governments after the Spanish domination had been broken. Since then both Bolivia and Paraguay have claimed tribute in taxes from the Gran Chaco area, have sought to colonise its fertile acres, exploit its resources and drive off encroaching neighbour-nations.

For that reason, Gran Chaco, one of the most valuable sections of land in the central region, has become a scene of numerous battles, were ten times over-subscribed the present disturbance is reported to be the most threatening on record. — Reuter.

BRIDGE NOTES

WHEN DECLARER IS ON THE DEFENSIVE

Usually when writing of the play of a hand at Contract—or Auction, for that matter—we think of the Declarer as the attacking player and his adversaries as the defence.

Very often, however, this position is reversed in actual play, especially in the early part of a hand at No Trumps. The adversaries may open the one suit that the Declarer does not hold stopped;
in that event he is on the defensive
at once.

The most interesting hands in play are frequently those in which there is one suit at No Trumps that the Declarer can just hold by perfect play. The poor or thoughtless player will stumble quickly into the move that gives his adversaries command of the suit; the expert player will bring to bear every device to hold the suit at bay while he makes his contract—holding up master cards, taking out adverse re-entries, throwing the lead, and generally showing that he can both read the cards and manage them.

The most called-for strategy in defeating an adverse attack at No
Trumps is that of holding up master cards.

Some players seem simply incapable of understanding when to hold up an ace and when to play
it. The problem is admittedly difficult in its more advanced manifestations, but in everyday play it is nearly always fairly simple.
There is no reason why the thoughtful player should ever make a present of a suit to the adversaries by not holding up, nor why he should "go to bed" with certain tricks by holding up winning cards when there is no reason for doing so.

The question of holding up usually turns on whether you can use your winning card more advantageously later—whether you can come in with it when one adversary is stripped of the suit and so cannot lead it again.

A recent hand may be taken to show how holding up an Ace kept a powerful adversary at bay.
South is playing "Three No
Trumps" and West leads the Jack
of Hearts:

North.
Spades: A K 8 6 4
Hearts: Q 6 4
Diamonds: K 6
Clubs: Q 5 3

West.
Spades: Q 9 7
Hearts: J 10 9 7 3 2
Diamonds: 7 4
Clubs: A 6

East.
Spades: 10 2
Hearts: K
Diamonds: Q J 9 5 3
Clubs: J 10 8 7 4

South.
Spades: J 6 3
Hearts: A 8 6
Diamonds: A 10 8 2
Clubs: K 9 2

West's opening lead of the Jack of Hearts suggests that this card is the top of a long suit. Declarer plays low from Dummy and East puts up the King. Declarer reasons that this must be a singleton, since there is no reason why
East should put up the King unless it is the only Heart he holds.
A calculation confirms this, since if West has led from the top of a five card suit, there are eleven Hearts in the three hands apart from that of East. The probability is that West originally held six Hearts and East only one.

This makes West's Heart suit
a very dangerous one if he has entry cards to establish it. If Declarer puts up the Ace of Hearts and so takes the first trick, he will have only Dummy's queen left as a stop in this suit. That could be forced out at once by West should he hold the Queen of Spades, for Declarer may lose this Spade trick
in establishing this suit.

It will be seen that South could lead the Jack of Spades and let it run, and so establish the suit,
but there is no point in taking the trick if it can be avoided.

Assuming, then that South decides to play for the drop of the Queen of Spades, and finds that West holds it guarded he can expect another Heart lead which will force out his remaining stop. In that suit should he now play the Ace.

Should West also possess the Ace of Clubs, he will be able to go on to make all his Hearts as soon as Declarer broaches the Clubs after the Spades.
Declarer must therefore let the first Heart trick go. He does not fear any suit that East may open.
His Contract is always there provided he does not allow West to establish the Hearts.

ESSAYISTS RECEIVE GOLD MEDALS.

King's Theatre Gives Fine Prizes.

PRESENTATION ADDRESS.

Dr. S. W. T'so, in his address
at the presentation of gold medals to essay competition
winners, yesterday, praised the literary ability shown by the student writers. The ceremony was held in the King's Theatre and prize-winners were called to the stage.

The following were the winners:—
The Shui-man, St. Paul's College, gold medalist; Chan Kim-ying, Munsang College, gold
medalist; Tsai Mong-yuk, St.
Paul's College; John Poon, St.
John's College; Fong Hiensui, Munsang College, and Gabriel Lau, St. Paul's College.

"The competition was opened to students of all schools in the Colony and six prizes were offered for the best six Essays on the cooling system of the King's Theatre," Dr. T'so explained.
"Intending competitors were given the opportunity of coming here to study and examine into the principle of the system and every detail of its mechanism was thoroughly explained and demonstrated to them."

"The six best essays were selected by Judges upon the merits of their English composition and the correctness of their technical description. The management, therefore, tenders its heartiest thanks to the Judges, the editors of the "Hong Kong
Telegraph" and the "Hong Kong
Daily Press," and Mr. Macfarlane, of the Dairy Farm & Cold Storage Co., who adjudged the technical part of the competition."

MUSICAL TREAT AT PENINSULA.

Two Orchestras For Sunday Night.

To-night's Symphonic Concert
at the Peninsula Hotel promises to be an exceptionally attractive musical treat. Well chosen numbers make up the programme,
and a particularly fine group appears in the second part—comprising three excellent compositions, "The Unfinished Symphony" by Schubert, "Cavalcade"
by Noel Coward and The Grand Descriptive Overture "1812" by Tchaikowsky.

The outstanding feature of this entertainment should be the rendering of the second part by the combined Orchestras of the 1st Battalion, South Wales
Borderers and The Hong Kong & Shanghai Hotels, Ltd., under the direction of the popular
Bandmaster, Mr. J. L. Gecks,
A.R.C.M.

HOTEL CAN'T SHOW MOTION PICTURES.

Programme Is Banned Despite Precedent.

The proposed screening of some Australian Films, that were to be exhibited at the Peninsula Hotel, has been cancelled owing to the decision of the Hon. Mr. F. H. King, Inspector-General of Police.

The reason given was that the hotel was not licensed to show pictures.
Mr. Caleb Cheong, who is exhibiting the pictures for the Commonwealth Government, said that he could not understand Mr. King's attitude.
"I sincerely hope, in view of all the circumstances, that Mr. King will reconsider his decision," said
Mr. Cheong.

CRAIGENGOWER FEEL ABSENCE OF THEIR INTERPORT BOWLERS

THIRD DEFEAT OF SEASON

BOWLING GREEN GIFTED WITH WOODEN SPOON

YACHT CLUB RUNNERS-UP

ELECTRIC RECORD SECOND TRIUMPH OVER CIVIL SERVANTS.

CRAIGENGOWER, WITHOUT THE SERVICES OF U.M. OMAR, G. L. BUCHANAN AND R. W. BRADBURY, SUFFERED THEIR SECOND SUCCESSIVE DEFEAT IN THE PREMIER LEAGUE, WHEN THEY WENT DOWN BEFORE THE CLUB DE RECREIO BY THEIR LARGE MARGIN OF 28 SHOTS.

THEIR SECOND TEAM, HOWEVER, VISITED KING'S PARK AND CONCLUDED THEIR FIXTURES WITH A 7 SHOTS VICTORY OVER THE RECREIO TEAM. THE KOWLOON BOWLING GREEN FAILED IN THEIR OBJECTIVE TO SHARE THE WOODEN SPOON OF THE FIRST DIVISION WITH THE POLICE. TAIKOO INFLICTED A 14 SHOTS DEFEAT ON THE OLDEST ESTABLISHED CLUB. THE HONG KONG ELECTRIC COMPLETED THE "DOUBLE" AGAINST THE CIVIL SERVICE C.C. BY THE NARROW MARGIN OF 4 SHOTS—THEIR THIRD WIN OF THE SEASON.

R. F. Luz, who secured third prize in the Open Bowls Championship which was decided on Thursday, was in no small way responsible for the Recrio's success at the Valley. His rink defeated D. Rumjahn's by 18 shots.

W. Wotherspoon, who represented Hong Kong in 1919, however, shared with F. L. Rapley the distinction of registering the biggest win of the afternoon. Both skips won their games by 20 shots.

The Kowloon Cricket Club second string met with their fifth defeat in six matches when they entertained the Yacht Club and lost by 13 shots. T. Ferguson's rink was the only one to record a success.

K'LOON RUGBY CLUB MEETING FIXED FOR THURSDAY.

Members Faced With Serious Financial Situation.

A meeting of the Kowloon Rugby Club is to be held at the Y.M.C.A. on Thursday night, at 9 a.m. for the discussion of the prospects for the season, and the election of officers, should it be decided to continue the Club.

Owing to the unsatisfactory financial position of the Rugby Club, a subscription list which will cover the Association as a whole, has been opened. It is highly probable that the annual subscription of the Club will be raised from $6 to $10 for the forthcoming year. A programme of social functions has also been proposed to alleviate the Club's precarious position.

SELECTIONS FOR THE MACAO MEETING.

Six Events Open The Second Half Of Season.

KEMBLE SHOULD WIN ON BLUE HEAVEN.

[By Glimmer.]

The second half of the 1932 Racing Season will open to-day when six events will be decided at the Fourth Extra Meeting at Macao this afternoon. The course is in excellent order after the three months' interim.

Jingo, which has won over $10,000 in stake money, should be a certain winner in the Amoy Handicap, the first event on the card. He has been unplaced in Macao on only three occasions and in his last two appearances was placed third and second on consecutive outings.

The absence of Tom Cobleigh will leave the Machine Gun Troop race an almost certainty for The Partridge, while Cebu should give Gold Bar a close race for the Fallow Handicap. The Queensland Handicap will witness the appearance of seven "B" Class Australian ponies of the Hong Kong Jockey Club over the seven furlong distance and a close finish should be provided by City of Melbourne and Kilrea.

T. P. K. Kemble will be riding a favourite in Blue Heaven in the Hankow Handicap and the newcomer should be just able to pilot her home ahead of Gallant Fox and Kanpaz, which is being ridden by D. Black. New King should be just too good for Toto in the Hangchow Handicap, though Arminius may offer a stern challenge. Arminius has an excellent Macao record.

The following are my selections for the six races on the card:

1ST RACE
Jingo.	Whitehall.
2ND RACE
The Partridge.	Red Leaves.
The Mouchie.	Gold Bar.
3RD RACE
Cebu.	Imperial Hall.
4TH RACE
City of Melbourne.	Kilrea.
5TH RACE
Blue Heaven.	Gallant Fox.
6TH RACE
New King.	Toto.
Arminius.

FINCHER DEFEATS GUEST

TO WIN K.C.C. SINGLES TITLE.

Dunne's Recovery Against White.

MRS. McTAVISH WINS.

E. C. Fincher fulfilled all expectations when he defeated A. E. P. Guest to win the Kowloon Cricket Club Singles Championship. G. A. White, however, caused a mild sensation when he took the first two sets against P. O. Dunne in the Junior Championship. The steadiness of the Shanghai player, however, proved too much for White, and he dropped the remaining three sets to lose the match.

Mrs. McTavish easily accounted for Miss M. Griffiths, a young player of considerable promise, in the Ladies' Championship, and today has the opportunity of bringing off a double, providing her partnership with E. C. Fincher in the Mixed Doubles proves successful.

W. C. Hung encountered little difficulty in defeating G. C. Burnett to enter the Final of the Handicap. It will be recalled that Hung eliminated E. C. Fincher, who was playing against too big a handicap, in the previous round.

To-day will witness the closing stages of a tournament which was scheduled to last a fortnight and which will conclude on the fourteenth day—a splendid tribute to the organisers and to D. S. Green in particular.

The following were the full results of yesterday's play.

Men's Senior Championship.

E. C. Fincher beat A. E. P. Guest 6-3, 6-2, 6-4.

Men's Junior Championship.

P. O. Dunne beat G. A. White 2-6, 4-6, 6-2, 6-3, 6-3.

Ladies' Championship.

Mrs. McTavish beat Miss M. Griffiths 6-2, 6-0.

Men's "A" Handicap Singles.

W. C. Hung (—16.3) beat G. C. Burnett (—3/6) 6-4, 6-7, 6-0.

Consolation Event.

F. E. Lawrence and W. A. Stewart beat R. Ohl and Mrs. Blandford 8-6, 6-4.

A. E. Collins and R. B. Hambly beat J. S. Smith and Miss S. Dalziel 6-0, 6-3.

TO-DAY'S PROGRAMME.

RUMJAHN AND FINCHER TO ACCOMPANY E. D. ANDREWS.

Exhibition Matches To Be Staged in Canton.

It is understood that E. D. Andrews, the New Zealand and British International lawn tennis player, will be accompanied by S. A. Rumjahn and E. C. Fincher the Colony's champion and runner-up, on his visit to Canton this week.

The tennis star, who hopes to remain in the Colony for ten days, will be the guest of the British Consul-General in Canton. Andrews was within an ace of defeating Frank Shields at Wimbledon, only a twisted ankle preventing him from bringing off a sensational triumph over the 1931 runner-up after being two sets in the lead.

SOUTH CHINA BEAT CRAIGENGOWER.

Fixture Abandoned From Friday.

COMFORTABLE WIN.

The South China Athletic Association concluded their "B" Division League Tennis season yesterday when they beat the Craigengower Cricket Club by 7 sets to 2.

This fixture was commenced at King's Park on Friday evening, but was abandoned on account of bad light when both sides had secured 3½ sets. The Craigengower side was unchanged yesterday, but several changes in partnerships were made, particularly noticeable being that of Zimmern and Choa, who failed so diamally as a pair against the C.R.C. in that vital match. South China introduced S. W. Wong into their side yesterday in place of Ho.

South China have lost only one match this season and that on a forfeit basis to the Chinese R.C. holders. Craigengower have lost but two games—the C.R.C. and the S.C.A.A.

Scores:—

OPEN MIXED DOUBLES CHAMPIONSHIP.

Entries Close On October 1.

Entries are now open for the 1932 Mixed Doubles tennis championship to be held under the auspices of the Chinese Recreation Club.

The Final Round will be played on the C.R.C. ground on November 13, the day following the semi-final round. An entrance fee of $3 per head will be charged for all competitors, all entry forms to be sent in before October 1. The First Round must be played off before October 15, the draw taking place at the C.R.C. at 5.30 p.m. on October 2.

Balls will be supplied to competitors, and the holding of the tournament is conditional on the receipt of not less than ten entries.

Men's Handicap "B" Final.

H. O. Huber (—15) v. H. Lubeseder (—9/9).

FLYING ALONG THE DANUBE

Amphibian Tour Of Central Europe

British Party Draws Great Attention

INTERESTING ADVENTURES

During April one of the original four-seat Sars Cutty Sark amphibian flying-boats made a demonstration tour of Europe with particular attention to operations in Yugoslavia and the Dalmatian coast. The machine was flown up from Cowes to Heston by Captain S. D. Scott, the Sars test pilot, with Captain Harold Balfour, M.P., as passenger on March 26th, and on the following morning with Flt. Lt. Pope as pilot and Capt. Balfour and Lord Lynton as passengers, an early start was made for Brussels. When landing at Brussels the machine ran into an almost invisible wire fence and one wing-tip bent and the undercarriage was slightly damaged. A new wing-tip float was at once sent out from Cowes, and with the help of two engineers of Imperial Airways repairs were quickly made. Here Captain S. D. Scott and Inspector Hancock joined the machine and Flt. Lt. Pope and Captain Balfour returned to England. On April 2 the Cutty Sark left Brussels for Cologne and Wuerzburg. The aerodrome at the latter place is 800 ft. above sea-level, and owing to the limited number of sheds all the local machines were turned out to make room for the storage of the Cutty Sark for the night. The charm of the essentially sporting indigence in no sense confused their ideas of business, as it was found that the little trouble in de-

Here the fact is worthy of mention that at all places visited the amphibian aroused more than the ordinary interest and was the subject of headlines in the local papers. A wonderful reception awaited the machine and its occupants at Zagreb.

Having reached the Adriatic, on April 11 a flight was made to Rabe Island through the Bora. Here the machine taxied into a tiny harbour, let down its wheels and ran up to the harbour wall. A pull from ashore with the bow mooring cable and it was possible to step from the fore deck of the Cutty Sark onto the quay. Here the machine was left tied up in charge of the local policeman. After taking on cans of petrol the machine was taxied out of the harbour and was flown to the protection of the mainland coast, where the tanks were filled.

After the Cutty Sark was flown down the coast to Split (Spalato), where the Commander-in-Chief of the Yugoslav Navy came to inspect the machine.

On April 13 a flight was made to Dubrovnik (Ragusa). From Dubrovnik the machine then flew along the coast to a pass between the mountains.

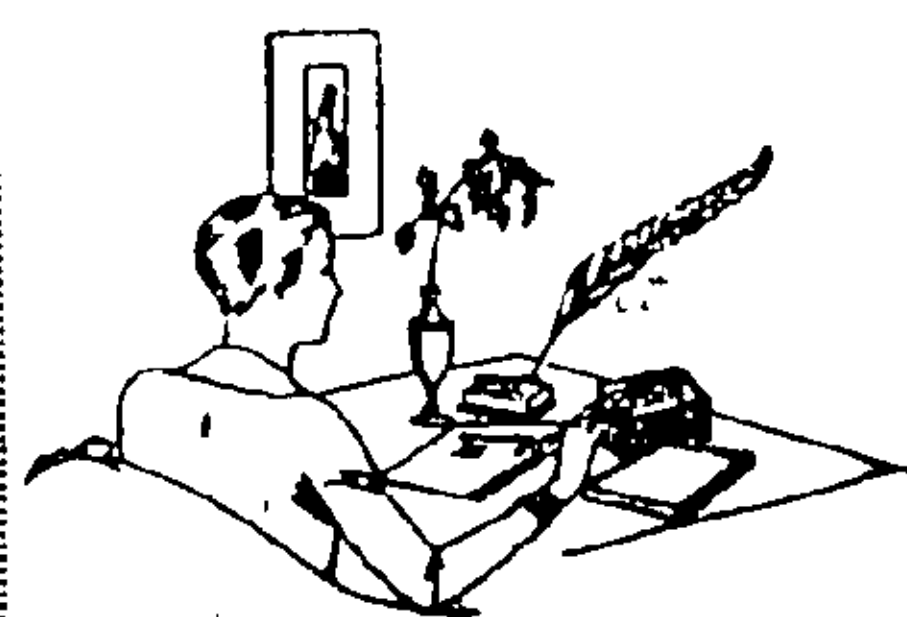

On April 16 the Cutty Sark left for Belgrade, but the climb to clear the mountains resulted in so much petrol being used up that a landing had to be made on the Drina River, here 50 yards wide with a 9-knot flow.

On the following morning the flight was continued to Belgrade.

On April 18 demonstrations were given at the civil aerodrome to the British Minister at Belgrade, to the Commander-in-Chief of the Yugoslav Air Navigation Co. and officials and members of the Aero Club.

On the following morning the machine was cleaned up and at 12.15 hours the return trip to England began, by way of Budapest, Vienna, Linz, Nurnberg, Frankfurt, Cologne and Brussels to Lympne and ended at Cowes on April 23.

The GLOBE TROTTER'S DIARY.

India's Snake Menace

The inauguration of a snake-killing campaign, something like "Rat Week" in England, is being widely urged in India.

A hundred people die of snake-bite every day in the whole of India—more than are killed by all the other wild creatures of the jungle together.

The four snakes which cause this tremendous toll of human life are the cobra, Russell's viper, phoosra, and the little krait. Many people are bitten by non-poisonous snakes who die from fright and at the hands of quick "snake curers."

The World Breaks Records

To-day the world may congratulate itself on a new record of its own making. For the first time in its history (according to elaborate statistics just published in Geneva) it has topped the 2,000,000,000 population mark.

This figure has been attained by a 20,000,000 increase in population during 1931.

Asia is still the most populous continent with a population of 1,193,000,000, and an increase of 11,000,000 over the figures for the previous year.

North and South America have 252,000,000 inhabitants, with an increase of 4,000,000. Africa, with 142,000,000, is the only continent to register a decrease—2,000,000.

Chicago's Mayor

Mr. Anton Cermak, the Czech Mayor of Chicago, is in Europe. He is paying his first visit to his native country, Bohemia, since he emigrated to Chicago as a penniless boy of fourteen.

Mayor Cermak is avoiding all publicity until he has finished a strenuous cure at Carlsbad.

He hopes to visit London on his way back to the States, but, as Mayor of the second-largest Czech city (Chicago has a Czech population of nearly 400,000), he will naturally prefer to spend most of his European visit in Czechoslovakia.

He Likes Our—Feds!—Professor P. V. Van Stein Callen-

ford has discovered a new reason for liking England. He has come all the way from Java to London for the International Congress of Prehistoric and Protohistoric Science, and he marvels not at our policemen, our beer and all the other things the film stars praise.

"You want to know why I like England? I will tell you a secret," he said. "You have such lovely beds! Such beautiful beds."

The professor should be a good judge—he weighs 24 stone and he is 6ft. 6in. tall.

Imperilling Penicillin

Prof. Elliott Smith, professor of anatomy in the University of London, contends that the oldest known skull in the world is the one discovered in London, and that it was the headpiece of an old lady of fifty who was left-handed. It is quite likely that the latter statement is correct and should have no dire effect upon the peace of the world, but really, when attempts are made to take priority of life away from the Peking man, the Professor should first have consulted the League of Nations. It is such subtle attempts as these to undermine a nation's sovereignty right which do so much to threaten universal harmony.

A Hairy Story

Centralia, Washington decided to hold a pioneer's celebration on August 3 and 4, and for the purpose decreed that all males should go unshaven until that day. Frank McDowell and Lloyd Dyson failed to do so. After a barber had been called to prove that both Frank and Lloyd were capable of growing a hirsute ornament on the chin they were fined Gold $25 and $10, respectively.

Frank's defence was that the "lady friend did not like whiskers." The judge retorted:—"Women will no doubt withdraw their objection when they find their sweethearts and husbands are being taken out of circulation."

Almost Human

A Chinese inventor of Shanghai, it is stated, has perfected a device by means of which a motor-car gives off a shrill shriek if anybody attempts to steal it. What we really want is a car that bites the driver savagely in the leg when he tries to cut in on a crowded road. Ah, but we have some motor cars that are very good at chasing pedestrians.

"If you can't hold your tongue, put your handkerchief in your mouth, and take it out when it is your turn to give evidence."—Judge Cluer to woman at Shoreditch.

New "Terror" For S.M.'s

A squad of recruits none of whom moves when the order to "form fours" is roared by a despairing sergeant-major—this is one of the problems that face the keen Catalonian who want to have the Catalan tongue used as often as possible.

A general and other senior officers have held a conference at Barcelona to decide what is to be done about it.

The case of the recruit who does not comply with an order, for the sound reason that he has no idea what the order is intended to convey, was brought up, and it has been decided that there must be no punishment in future for such an "offence."

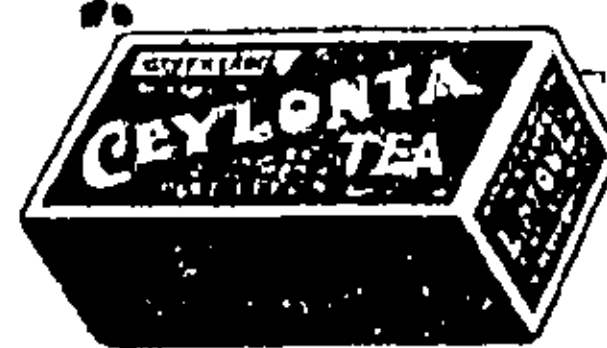

In this way, a grave senior officer declares conflicts which have arisen with recruits will be avoided. So officers and N.C.O.'s in Barcelona will now, presumably, have to give orders in two languages—Castilian and Catalan.

THE HOLY GOLDEN PAVILION

China Sends Temple To Chicago

Reproduction Of Exquisite
Lama Temple

BEAUTIFUL ARCHITECTURE

One of the striking buildings at the forthcoming Chicago Exposition will be the Golden Pavilion, a faithful reproduction of the Holy Lama temple built by the Chinese Emperor, Chien-lung, at Jehol. The structure, composed of thousands of parts fashioned in China, was brought to this country through the efforts of the Swedish explorer, Sven Hedin, who gives here the story of this masterpiece of Chinese architecture.

By SVEN HEDIN.

In the year 1703 the great Manchu Emperor, Kang-hsi, erected his first country seat near the little town of Jehol, in the land of Harchin Mongols, outside the Great Wall. Thus he laid the foundation of the famous Summer Palace, China's Fontainebleau. The Summer Palace reached its highest renown during the sixty years when his grandson, Emperor Chien-lung, sat on the Dragon Throne and from it ruled, during the Summer months, the immense reaches of Eastern and Central Asia, which were called the Middle Kingdom.

Within the walls of the Summer Palace there two great Emperors created a world of beauty and richness, unlike anything in the world. Nestled in woods and verdant parks, where deer grazed, were handsome palaces, pavilions and temples, reflecting their facades in ponds and little lakes, which emptied crystal-clear waters from the surrounding hills. Here were festivals held here were military manoeuvres; and hence started each year the Emperor's Autumn hunt to the region north of Jehol, where the tiger prowled through the jungle.

In ancient times the Mongols were China's most dangerous enemies. As a defence against them, as well as against the Tibetans and other savage hordes, Chinese Emperors, more than 2,000 years ago, had erected the Great Wall. When, therefore, Kang-hsi founded the Summer residence at Jehol on Mongolian territory, it was a symbol of victory over the barbarians. He desired, rather, to increase the majesty and strength of his office so as to impress the Mongols and their rulers and thus hold them in check without having to resort to stern measures.

This idea was further developed by his grandson, Chien-lung. He did not limit himself to adding to the buildings already created by his grandfather—thirty-six palaces, pagodas, pavilions, libraries, harems and galleries. He also built, in a semi-circle to the north and east of the Summer Palace, a series of magnificent Lama temples, some of which belong to the grandest and architecturally most perfect structures ever created in the Middle Kingdom.

These temples, like the Summer Palace, had a certain political mission to fulfil. Emperor Chien-lung desired to display religious pomp and glamour greater by far than had ever been seen by the Wangs and Khans of Mongolia; he wished to impress them, stir their admiration and at the same time appear as the true protector and protector of the Lama faith. Also, in this religious pomp and majesty the Emperor found a means by which he could bind the Mongol rulers with the golden chains of their faith to the Son of Heaven and the Dragon Throne.

Few excursions from Peking are more profitable than a visit to the temples around Jehol, some 115 miles to the northeast. Here, surrounded by undulating hills and mountains, lies the little town close by the Jehol River, which, north of the Summer Palace, receives from the west a tributary, the Lian River. Usually dry, its bed is crossed by a marble bridge, and on the northern shore, in this marvellous wealth of temples, one is first attracted by the one commonly known as Putai. It is so called because Chien-lung, who erected it, claimed his new creation to be a copy of the Dalai Lama's temple palace, Putai, in Lhasa. Its correct name, however, is "Putai-tsung-cheng-mino," "The Temple of Pute's Teaching." The monasteries and temples of Putai are surrounded by a rectangular stone wall. In its park of pine trees of Tibetan design—dormitories, school rooms, quarters for pilgrims, kitchens, storerooms, &c.

From the Lion Valley one proceeds through the eastern gate and passes under a triumphal arch, to a yard where two beautifully sculptured stone elephants, natural size, guard the entrance to a pavilion, also of stone. In this building are three gigantic tablets, each of memorial tablets, on vertical plaques of polished surface. Emperor Chien-lung's charter of foundation, composed by himself, has been inscribed in four different languages—Mandarin, Chinese, Mongol and Tibetan. One walks on flags of slate between the trees in the park and passes another triumphal arch, which, which supports the magnificent facade of the main monastery building. One sees on either side imposing cloisters, and at last stands on the eastern base of the enormous terrace, created both by the emperor and human hand, which supports the magnificent facade of the main monastery building, a square, immense structure of stone and brick.

The tremendous facade is adorned with Tibetan windows, eleven storeys high, with numerous faience niches bearing images of Buddha. One is overwhelmed and bewildered by this stupendous man-made wonder. When the visitor reaches the top of the 162 steps which lead to the upper terrace and at last stands on the pinnacle, a wind stirs in the pine branches, and between the trees in the park the ancient monasteries glow dully in yellow, gray and red. In the distance runs the Lion Valley; on its southern slope is the wall of the Summer Palace.

The large stone quadrangle is but a shell around a square yard, because only its three highest storeys were once connected with wooden dormitories and temple rooms, located within its walls, and now destroyed by time and for the most part obliterated. With a certain excitement one walks through the gate of the yard, because in this square he will behold the temple which bears the name of the Golden Pavilion, the most holy in Putai.

It is difficult to withhold an exclamation of delight when one comes for the first time upon this masterpiece of exquisite Chinese architecture back of which are thousands of years of tradition and development. From a stone terrace four feet high rises the quadrangular temple. Each wall is seventy feet long. Of special interest is the outer arcade of pillars, whose red-lacquered columns support the lower roof. Below this runs a second-sculptured frieze, gaily coloured, forming a varied pattern of dragons, arabesques, flowers and symbols.

Two copper roofs plated with thick, dull gold protect the interior of the temple against weather and wind. On both roofs the eaves turn upward. The upper roof forms a pyramid, the four sides of which run together in a "stupal" An five sections, symbolizing the five elements, earth, water, fire, air and ether. At the eight corners of the roof gape dragon heads and symbolic figures, all of gold, and from them hang bronze bells, to the tongue of which are tied feathers of falcons, so that they may swing even in the mildest breeze, making the bells ring.

The main entrance of the Golden Pavilion opens to the south. By means of a triple stone stairway the terrace is reached. The three wooden doors of the facade are open. Doors and windows consist of red-lacquered scroll work, tastefully carved in wood. In the temple hall reigns a mystic gloom through which rise the twelve tall columns that support the upper roof. On the altar stands a figure of the reformer, Tong-kun, who more than five hundred years ago reshaped Lamaism and cleansed the faith of certain Shamanistic ideas inherited and adopted from older times. Around the walls sit in a meditative position Lamaists' whole colourful Pantheon of divine images cast in brass and bronze or carved in wood. Between them stand sacrificial vessels and urns, miniature pagodas, symbols and masked instruments—the inevitable frame of Lamaism.

The Golden Pavilion and a similar temple near Jehol, called Hsin-Kung, are supposed to have in China no superior in architectural beauty. In the monastery cities of Tashi-Lampo, Kumbum and Urga I have seen Lama temples of more impressive size and of mightier outline, and the temples and cloisters around Lhasa are, I admit, more magnificent. But for exquisite taste and elegance they cannot be compared to the Golden Pavilion. It is this Golden Pavilion, now being reconstructed in Chicago, that will raise its glittering roof of gold close to blue Lake Michigan before the end of August this year.

This temple belongs in the New World, the land of emigrants, and will undoubtedly be regarded with the respect it deserves. I do not think that exaggerate in saying that the Golden Pavilion will be one of the main attractions of the exposition. Afterward the pavilion will be removed to Lincoln Park—a memorial to strange historic events and a shining example of the high standard of Chinese architecture and art.

EVERY piece of news in the press is advertising. Similarly every advertisement in the press is news. Commercial advertising is much more than making known; it is the business of publicly announcing something—a commodity, a service, an event—in a manner which enables the public to participate in the advantages offered in the announcement.

ITS PURPOSE IS NOT COMPLETED BY MAKING THE ANNOUNCEMENT

There must be an economic transfer. The public must be made to realise the value which the announcement offers and to take action.

A Disturbed World.

Seldom, if ever, has the world been in a more unsettled state than now and the probabilities for the immediate future are dangerous and alarming. The threat of war in many quarters, political unrest everywhere and the severity and prolonged period of the economic depression combine to form a series of calamities which have shaken modern civilisation and plunged tens of millions into distress and despair. For months the cables have reported fresh disturbances spread over the entire globe and the main apprehension concerns the fear that the whole world may be plunged into armed conflict rather than anxiety that trouble should occur in any one particular sector. It is not unnatural that, while regretting that any trouble should occur at all, the majority of people would feel relieved that any such trouble should be confined to the actual scene. A survey of present conditions leaves little other than a gloomy foreboding. Events in the Far East have lost none of their gravity and a fresh crisis may be precipitated at any moment. In South America, Bolivia and Paraguay have commenced actual warfare. In the United States economic conditions are extremely bad and the nation is divided on foreign policy. Europe is seething with the old political intrigues and squabbles, with Germany as the storm centre. The Danubian States are bankrupt; Spain is passing through a period of constitutional reorganization; and French ambitions continue to create uneasiness among her neighbours. In the British Empire a better outlook prevails, but the Irish Free State dispute and India remain two harassing and difficult problems the solutions of which have yet to be found. The fears of the "Red" menace are only partially allayed pending the fulfilment of the Soviet's industrial plans. In the midst of all this disorder there are few reassuring signs. Conference has followed conference with tedious monotony and the results have been practically negligible. All illusions as to the potency of the League of Nations have been violently dispelled and the failure of the Disarmament Conference, after weary months of argument, accentuated the disappointment that followed the Geneva meetings. Lausanne produced no valuable accomplishment, and while hopes are held that Lausanne may provide a foundation for future achievements in the way of international agreement and co-operation, it is unfortunate but true that grounds exist for doubting that these expectations will ever be realized. The one Conference that can really be termed successful was the Empire gathering at Ottawa and if the full fruits of the constructive efforts there are to be enjoyed international co-operation is necessary. Great hopes were held of the forthcoming world economic conference but already suggestions of postponement have been advanced and a sick and weary world is once again disappointed by its statesmen. The business slump is attributed by many as the cause of so many acute and serious disturbances, but while economic ill-aggravated conditions, most of the outbreaks, such as those in Manchuria and South America, have their causes in the quest of two nations for more territory.

There is slight consolation in the fact that a definite course will be decided in the very near future, as events are approaching a head in every dispute. Thus, whatever the result, at least the present harmful uncertainty will be removed. The best that can be hoped is that sanity and reason will be exercised to prevent any further warfare.

LOCAL SHARE PRICES.

[To the Editor, "Sunday Herald."]
Sir,—In one of their recent Summaries the Stock Exchange criticised what they call a "non-descript group" for "Bear attacks" on certain local stock, specially Green Island Cements and China Lights.

As the Stock Exchange's "puzzled aloofness" is of little use to their clients, it may perhaps be of interest to consider the Stocks mentioned and their real value from an investor's point of view.

Cements paid a dividend last year of 51 cents per combined share. They have been as high as $20 per share, surely a figure out of all proportion. They owe money on their new plant, they owe money to the Bank and they are as most industrial concerns faced with very severe competition, possible strikes, breakdowns, exchange vagaries, in short all the ailments an industrial concern must cope with. Why then this high figure on Cement Shares? Simply because they have been boosted much too high.

The Cement Co., is undoubtedly a good concern doing good business and turning out good Cement, but they are unable to pay a dividend justifying these high prices. At par—$8.50 they are worth having with a dividend of 51 cents. At their present price $13 they are too high. I understand it is more than doubtful that they will pay a higher dividend this year, as a matter of fact one would hardly expect it seeing the Directors had to call up fresh Capital last month to pay off part of the outstandings on the plant. By the way, the final instalment on the plant is due at the beginning of 1934 and it is quite possible there will be a further call next year to meet this.

Smoke Nuisance Bogy.

I am fully aware of the value of the new plant and also of the company's property at Hok Un, but to the shareholders the plant is only worth what it can produce in dividends on a sound basis, and the same applies to the property. There is also the ever-present possibility of the Cement Company having to vacate Hok Un owing to the smoke nuisance, in which case the value of the property would have to be offset against a new site, buildings and loss of business during the time of transit. The G.I.C. shares being industrial should come down to a level where they give a return of 7 to 7½ per cent. and not 2½ per cent. as hitherto.

No Reserves.

The same remarks apply generally to the China Lights. Here we have a company with a share Capital of $6,000,000—with no Reserves. Last year they paid a 50 cents dividend, in other words 2½ per cent. on $20.00, round about which figure they have been quoted till recently. As a matter of fact 12 months ago they were $33.00, yet boosters on Ice House Street.

It is granted that the China Light is a public utility company and therefore in a somewhat different class to the Cement Company. But why these high prices on their shares? I hear their plant and machinery is getting old and soon needs considerable renewals, and they are negotiating with the present Managers, to give up the management for which a Compensation is to be given. The Compensation may be anything from $600,000 to $1,000,000—to be given the Managers in shares, a new issue, which again means the Company has to increase its earning power to be able to maintain the dividend on the increased Capital. They may be able to do so, but this increase of Capital will make it difficult to pay higher dividends and goodness knows the shareholders have been waiting long enough for a better return. And what will happen to the stock if the Managers decide to sell their shares after they have been allotted? I just ask you.

From the above I think it is quite clear that these Stocks have been quoted at much too high a figure and unless they come down to a basis which will give the shareholders a sound return on their money the Brokers cannot hope to retain the confidence and patronage of their clients.

HIDEOUS NOISES.

[To the Editor, "Sunday Herald."]
Sir,—Cannot something be done to stop the hideous noises made by the thousands and the thousands of Chinese Newspapers in the streets? (Continued on page 9 of the Herald.)

MANCHURIA PROBLEM BROADLY VIEWED

IDEALISM IS CHINA'S STRONGHOLD

JAPAN'S CHALLENGE

(By E. L. Allen.)

Two books have recently been published in the United States on the Manchurian question, one giving the Chinese point of view and the other the Japanese. Naturally enough, neither author aims at an impartial presentation of the facts; each writes as an advocate pleading his country's cause and each uses arguments calculated to have weight with the American public.

What is particularly interesting is that the two use quite different lines of approach to their readers. The Chinese appeal is throughout to American ideals. He points to the traditional American opposition to imperialism, and the traditional American friendship for China, citing various declarations by American leaders on the subject of the rights of weaker nationalities. On the other hand, the Japanese case is rested throughout on American practice. Reference is made to the staid side of American history, the means by which the Panama Canal was secured, the policy, at times of economic penetration and at times of armed intervention, pursued by Washington in Central and South America, and on. China says, "We appeal to you in the name of your ideals!" Japan says, "We are only doing what you have done many times!"

Sympathy of Nations.

Is not that really where the difficulty lies? Is not one main reason why other countries have felt that their hands were tied over the Sino-Japanese dispute simply that in their heart of hearts they know that they would do exactly what Japan did were they in her position? We embody our ideals in international documents and sign them amid great display, but we still have our history to live down, we still have to show that we should be prepared to adhere to these ideals to our own cost, if the situation arose which demanded it. Japan has every right to borrow Emerson's words for her reply to our indignant protests, "What you speak so loud, that I cannot hear what you say!"

Amid the wounds from which mankind is suffering to-day, there is one which will take a great deal of healing. It is the appalling gap which exists between the religion which Christendom professes and the principles on which it actually conducts its affairs. The fact that Christianity is honoured, that its representatives enjoy social prestige, and that in certain countries it has the backing of the State—all this counts for nothing. The whole thing looks rather like a trick, a trick by which we give Christ a score of things He doesn't in the least want, in order that we may excuse ourselves from giving Him the one thing He does want—obedience. The attitude behind it is the one which Samuel Butler pilloried when he says of one of his characters, "Though he would not stand seeing the Christian religion made light of, he was not going to see it taken seriously!"

Man's Weakness.

Many a man to-day suffers from a secret, unacknowledged unhappiness just because there is this gap between his ideals and his actual conduct. We may feel that circumstances force our hands, so that there is no alternative, or this may simply be an excuse to conceal our own cowardice. But in either case, we know perfectly well that the things which in our quiet, thoughtful moments we know to be the highest are not those which have most weight with us when we are transacting our daily business. No man can hope to retain peace of mind while one half of that mind is saying, "This I ought to do!" and the other half answers, "But you do not do it!"

This perpetual howling is becoming an unbearable nuisance. It penetrates our homes and our offices and is nerve-racking. The cry is of such an ear-splitting nature, and its awful monotony is depressing to an extreme. Surely something could be done by the Powers that be?

Yours, etc.,
"Stock" Or "H."
Hong Kong, September 10, 1932.

There is only one place in the world where a man can find true peace. That is the place in which the effort is made to bring what he is into harmony with what he knows quite well he ought to be. Such an effort may cost a great deal, and may even bring a considerable measure of suffering with it. It would be deception to pretend that a man can come into possession of himself on easy terms. But, after all, is not the hardship which the mountaineer endures on his way to the summit infinitely preferable to the misery to which a man is reduced who sinks, without making any effort, into the swamp that lies in the valley? Is it not better that we should suffer because we are trying to bring more truth and courage and sincerity into our lives than that we should suffer because we are trying to dodge our consciences and can't succeed?

THREE SAPS WENT SAILING.

(With apologies to the composer of "The Three Fishers.")

Three youths they resolved to sail—out to the East,
Away to the East called the fair Hong Kong;
Each thought that of riches he'd soon have a feast,
Their friends seemed quite happy to bid them "so long!"
For sons must work if their fathers be poor,
And better to leave for abroad I am sure,
Than at Home be in poverty moaning.

Three maidens grand castles built
in the air,
And decked them with dreams of a speedy return,
How with well-to-do husbands in marriage they'd pair,
Then all their poor friends they would spurn!
Thus while men did work, the women in sleep,
Laid up for themselves cruel wakings to reap,
Accompanied soon with sad moanings.

Three clerks are a-tolling away in the East,
Away in the East called the fair Hong Kong;
But their purses has't swollen with golden yeast,
There's no such thing as a prosper—"hong!"
Alas, they must work to the end of their lives,
But they never can make these girls their wives,
For Hong Kong is with poverty moaning.

PETTICOATS AGAIN IN VOGUE.

FINE wool net is delightful for frocks, blouses, sleeves, and yokes, and for short frocks to wear over silk and jersey frocks.

There are many smart shoes, one in particular being ideal for days in the country. It is a court shoe, in black, white, blue, or green, kid, perforated all over and therefore deliciously cool.

Belts to match these shoes fasten with large metal buttons. There are also white kid belts spotted in colours to go with spotted frocks and blouses.

Georgette hats are fashioned like little tweed sport models, the trim material being stitched on to a foundation of mesh and trimmed with green grass ribbons. These hats are nice to wear with plain frocks, and crepe de chine gowns for weddings and other smart parties.

Petticoats are definitely "in" again. The favourite style is expressed in tulle, to be worn under lace, crepe, or delicate cotton frocks, and the more the tulle, the better. The better the women pleased!

White silk poplin jackets look well over frocks of navy, brown or black woollen mousseline. A "two piece" like this, with a navy, brown or black flat sailor hat banded with white silk poplin, as found as the crown, is one of Fashion's latest words.

LARGE BRIGHT BEADS.

YOUR new necklace can be of almost any material, so long as it is of checker length and of large bright beads.

There are stuff-covered beads which can be washed and strings of wooden beads for bathing.

Glass beads are in a variety of colours.

Steel is set between lumps of onyx and jet, and glass is seen with steel plaques. Shiny leaves of mother of pearl make another "right new" necklace.

THE TINY CAPS.

A MILLINER has designed many tiny caps with stand up brims, after the sailor cap type, and a few she has covered with flowers.

One cap which is a great change from the great millinery of the moment is smothered with lilies of the valley, dainty in floppy proportion, but unlike the new fashion for flower necklets, the lilies are all artificial.

Then, a small cape to wear with the cap is also flower covered. The cape merely covers the shoulders, and the pair would make a really exciting scheme with a fresh, sprightly garden party frock.

KNITTED SILK.

KNITTED silk is something new for street wear. One of the latest Summer suits of navy blue knitted silk has a plain skirt and bolero jacket designed with a round neckline and finished with a big handkerchief scarf of shaded blue.

It is worn with a knitted blue silk skirt topped by a cascade of silk fringe and gloves of navy blue knitted silk.

ANKLETS.

ANKLETS of silver or gold links are in fashion once again and many girls who have never thought of wearing anklets are now trying the effect.

This season the anklet goes under the stocking, never over. The right leg would appear to be the correct place, and it is worn as low as possible. Undoubtedly, stockings without rib show off the anklet best, and a silver chain provides contrast with sun tan silk stockings.

ONE-PIECE MAILLOTS.

PLAIN white one piece maillots, by the way, will be the favourite swim suits this summer, they are sponsored by Lelong, Jane Regny, Bera Boren and others.

SILK AND WOOL MATERIALS IN VARIETY.

SILK, wool and cotton materials are perfect this season, and never before have we had so many kinds of each from which to choose. It makes it far simpler to dress well when you need not have a similar crepe de chine frock, or the same kind of jersey suit, as the woman next door!

A new crepe de chine is heavy, and dull as suede, with a slight bloom on it. It is produced in all the latest shades, and is used for beautiful tailored frocks, for suits, and for coats.

One type is printed with such a large pattern that it is difficult to decide which is ground, and which is pattern. At the other end of the scale comes a tiny delicate flower pattern massed so closely that a first, clip-down-the-back type, are possible. The effect is charming, and useful of course.

Very pretty, too, is the flower de-zen like Japanese almond or cherry blossoms very finely etched in tender colours on a pastel tinted ground. It is interesting to note that this type is equally successful for evening gowns, for "special occasion" afternoon frocks and for elegant negligees.

THE GOLF BAG.

THERE is no need to pack oddments into many pockets when playing golf now that a handy case, in the shape of a miniature golf bag, will hold all that is required on the "round".

There are two compartments, one for a couple of golf balls or marbles, and the like, and the other water proofed and closed with a lightning fastener. A sponge is kept here. Spaces are also provided for tees, pencil and washable scoring table.

I must not omit to mention that this bag is to be attached to the handle of an ordinary handbag.

LATEST PYJAMAS.

SCHIAPIARELLI favours both beach frocks and pyjamas. The former, very slim and "little-girlish" of the "put your arms-in-first, clip-down-the-back" type, are of crinkly crepe or uncrushable linen. In her latest pyjamas, in navy blue boucle silk, the sleeveless bodice and trousers are made in one piece. They are worn with a very wide periwinkle blue and white voile belt, fastened with large silver hooks, and a bust-length periwinkle wool sweater with sleeves that roll up above the elbows. This ensemble has been selected by several very smart sportswomen, among them Mrs. Stanley Smith.

AMBER PRETTY AND PRECIOUS.

AMBER is not, at the moment, frequently worn, and that is just why it is considered precious and pretty. There are short amber necklaces and tight bracelets, as well as brooches to fasten scarf collars or hats of soft materials.

Amber beads contrast prettily with crystal, and appear alternately in graduated rows. As a bracelet, perhaps the class is the only thing amber about it, the rest being crystal.

BLOUSES AND PULL-OVERS.

HOW many blouses and pull-overs do you possess? A good many women have 30 or 40. The blouses are made, variously, of satin, crepe de chine, pique, muslin, lace, flowered and spotted voile, striped and spotted crepe, Shangtung, and flowered chiffon. The pull-overs are soft white wool worked in Irish crochet stitch, white and natural thread Irish crochet lace, cashmere and angora wool. Some of the wool ones are worked in stripes, and others in wide zigzags. One or two of the blouses and jumpers were bought from expensive shops, but most were home-made with the aid of good patterns and originals.

Perhaps you think these women have many other clothes too? Not at all. They have two complete suits, one of fine black wool and one of navy blue, also a flared skirt of dark brown wool, and a little jacket of white, angel-skin satin, and with these blouses, they ring plenty of changes in daytime toilettes. Again, the plainly tailored angel-skin jacket looks very well with a semi-evening gown of black silk mureaux.

A blouse of plaid taffetas, in blues, reds or greens, is one of the smartest ideas at the moment. Another blouse is made like the top of an evening dress, in soft flowered chiffon, with a low neck at the back, a draped effect in front, and a sash at the waist to tie at the back. This blouse can be worn with a long satin skirt for dinner and theatre parties, as well as with a "best" two-piece suit.

Another suggestion is a blouse of thick white crepe de chine, with a long satin collar of striped crepe de chine and small puff sleeves to match the scarf. This makes a very pretty finish to a suit. Navy blue silk can be used instead of white.

HONG KONG AND THE NEW TERRITORIES. — No. 61.

A Strange Appetite.

During my absence from the Colony the Cobra, which was caught at Repulse Bay during the first week in May, shared quarters with 2 Bamboo Snakes and various other small snakes and frogs. On my return I commented on the fact that both Bamboo Snakes had disappeared. Escape from the house is impossible one Bamboo Snake had eaten the other. A green grass snake caught this morning and placed with the cobra had also disappeared. Cobras prefer mice and birds to frogs and I had not known before that they ate other snakes and such venomous ones as the Bamboo snake, which is a Pit viper related to the Rattle-snake of America, Pythona from Aberdeen.

Three young pythons caught recently at Aberdeen form an interesting addition to the collection of living snakes domiciled at the University. A Common Keel Bungarus candulus, larger than most local specimens I have seen, shares quarters with the Cobra. It is a nocturnal snake and during the day rarely shows itself outside the hole it has made amongst the rocks and earth in the snake house.

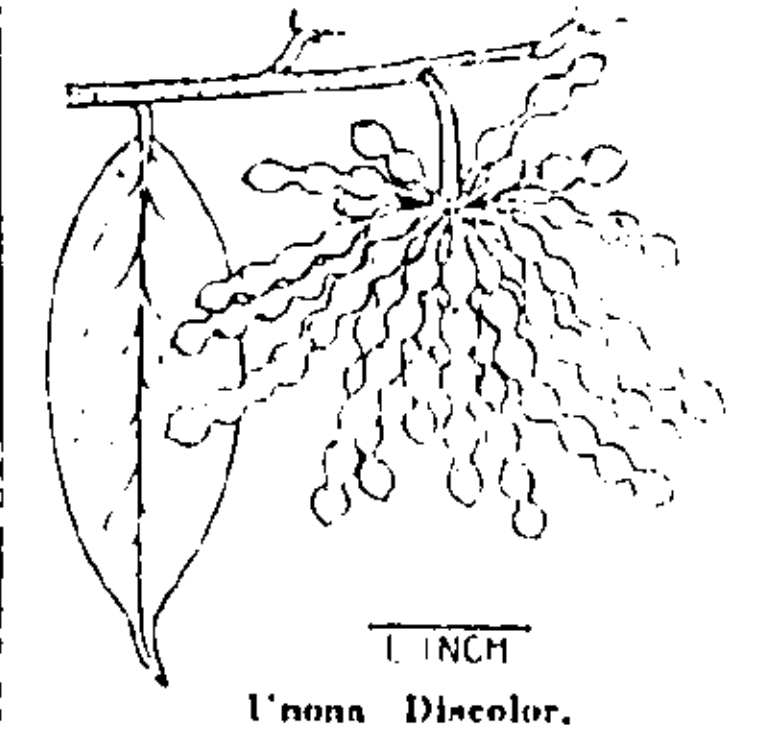

Cape d'Agulhas.

A walk along the path to the Wireless station revealed a number of interesting plants. The fruits of two poisonous species were noticed, namely the large horn-shaped fruits of Strophanthus divergens and the spherical orange fruits of Strophanthus is related to S. hispidus from which the drug strophanthin is prepared. Strophanthus is related to S. nux-tomica from which strychnine is extracted. Two species of Strophanthus grow wild in Hong Kong—e. between Repulse Bay and Stanley, on Stanley peninsula, etc., namely S. punctulata and S. angustiflora. In both the fruits are borne in small bunches, but in the first species they are only 1 inch in diameter whereas in the second they are about 1 1/2 inches across. The leaves are opposite and possess a well marked vein.

Thaunbergia grandiflora, one of the Colony's most beautiful flowering twining, was seen in flower; the flowers are large and pale blue in colour. Bartelia cristata a flowering shrub with mauve flowers blossoming from October to December was also noticed. This is, I believe, the first locality from which this shrub was recorded in Hong Kong but I have never observed it before on Cape d'Agulhas though have seen it on Tsing Yi Island; it is common on Stonecutter's Island. The most interesting find was that of Lygodium pinnatifidum the largest twining fern of the Old World tropics, with pinnae much bigger than a man's hand. This fern is very rare in Hong Kong, I have only previously found it once on Tsing Yi Island though there is a plant, presumably wild, in the grounds of Government House. It is common in the Philippines and the Malay Archipelago where the stem is used by the natives instead of string for tying purposes.

Tai O, Lan Tan Island.

A short visit was paid to Tai O, a collection long, however, to permit a brief exploration of a steep precipitous nullah. The largest native tree fern, Cyathea spinulosa, grows luxuriantly in this nullah bed. The tree fern naturalised in the Glencely ravine in Alsophila tomentosa and is, I believe, a native of Formosa. Giant Arums grow plentifully in this well watered valley but the rarest find was a group of plants of Pellotum triquetrum one of the most primitive of vascular plants living, and one of the very few plants more advanced than mosses which never form roots. I have never previously found this plant in the Hong Kong territories.

At this time of the year the fruits of the shrubs and trees are more likely to be seen than the flowers. Some are very characteristic. Those of Unona discolor, illustrated here, could not be confused with those of any other species. The Annonaceae (Notes 28) is one of our most primitive families of flowering plants, five genera are found wild in Hong Kong and in addition Annona squamosa is cultivated for its fruit, known as Custard Apple. The fruits of Unona discolor are green when young but later turn yellow and finally change in December to deep red or purple.

Thirty men are still missing and boats were searching the river until sundown, and after while searchlights played across the water. It is feared that the quest is vain and that these 30 souls must be added to the already heavy list of dead. More than 40 bodies have been recovered already.

Amazing Fortune.

One eye-witness of the disaster, who is blessing the strange fortune which caused him to miss the ferry through a set of unusual circumstances, gave a gruesome account of the occurrence.

"I had just missed the boat after a sprint for the wharf and was still shouting replies to the jovial taunts of the fellows aboard, some of my pals, when the whole ship seemed to rise out of the water and there was a deafening explosion. Wreckage and men flew through the air in every direction. Some of the bodies fell on the roofs of building nearby and others littered the river. Some of them sank at once and others swam about feebly and dazed. I jumped in and tried to help them."

He helped pull men ashore until he was exhausted.

Grisly Coincidence.

The dead lie in the same ferry house where, in 1904, more than 1,000 victims of the "General Slocum" disaster were shrouded. It is coincidence, also, that Police Commissioner Mulrooney should now be directing the rescue work, for it was he who, a plain constable then, arrested the master of the "General Slocum" who was charged after the loss of the crowded excursion ship had turned turtle in the river, following an explosion.

An even more surprising coincidence lies in the fact that the "Observation" met her end at the identical spot on which the "General Slocum" plunged to the river's bottom, carrying men, women and children to their deaths.

Mystery in Mishap.

There is mystery in the case of the more recent tragedy, just as there was in that former case. Many insist that it was a bursting boiler which caused the "Observation" to break up. But one witness declares stoutly that he saw the boiler hurled into space, fully intact.

The ferryboat was a ship of ill-omen. A few years ago she capsized at the pier and since that time many had feared to travel aboard her. She was hired to carry the workers, who were crowded aboard her when she sank, back and forth between the mainland and the shore of an adjacent island where the new Penitentiary is being built.

There will be an official investigation, for allegations that the boat was unsafe for travel and that the safety valve was held down while steam was being raised, are being freely discussed. The entire engine-room crew perished, however, and it is unlikely that the truth will ever be learned.

NEW CHARLIE CHAPLIN FILM.

Silent Picture In Hollywood.

Hollywood. Mr. Charles Chaplin was asked today if he could confirm the rumours current on the Riviera that he intended to establish a talking film studio near Nice or Cannes.

The famous film comedian replied that he had no such plans. "I am busy," he said, "writing a story on my recent travels in the Far East for an American magazine. When that is finished, I shall begin to think about my next picture, which will be a silent film with synchronised music."

"It will be made here, but I have not yet chosen those who will act with me, nor can I say what the next production will be."

Monthly Water Return.

The monthly water return for September, shows the consumption in the City and Hill districts totalled 396.95 million gallons, while the consumption on the mainland totalled 191.19 million gallons.

The estimated consumption per head per day is 33.4 gallons on the Island, and 20.3 gallons on the mainland.

The total storage in the reservoirs on the Island is 2,289.41 million gallons, as compared with 2,102.48 million gallons at this time last year. The Kowloon reservoirs contain a total of 687.25 million gallons, all reservoirs being level.

The rainfall for the year recorded at the Royal Observatory up to August 31, is 82.83 inches as against 60.71 inches for the corresponding period of last year.

JEHOL TENSION AGAIN

Nanking, Sept. 8. All public meetings, demonstrations, and similar gatherings are strictly prohibited by the Municipal Authorities in a proclamation issued yesterday.

The Government is apprehensive of grave difficulties in the event of demonstrations following Japan's recognition of Manchukuo. During the national crisis, the proclamation states, the maintenance of order within the country is of paramount importance. Therefore, under present emergency conditions, parades, demonstrations, and all other popular movements which may disturb public order must be banned.

Further developments of a grave nature are anticipated on the Jehol frontier in the near future.

It is learnt that at an undisclosed place between Jehol and the Heilungkiang Provincial Government, and the front General Ma Chao-shan last week held a special military conference, which was attended by his subordinates, Generals Wu Sung-lin, Han Hse-hao, Po Ping-san, Tong Wen and Nan Ting-fang.

COMMUNIST GETS HEAVY SENTENCE.

Returned Banishee Pleads Reform.

Banished five years ago and arrested on August 24 for returning five years before his sentence was completed, Ng King-fu, an alleged Communist, was given the maximum penalty of 12 months' imprisonment in Central Police Court yesterday.

Mr. C. Y. Kwan appeared for the defendant and asked His Worship for leniency. He told the Court that the man had returned to the Colony only for a visit. During his two-month stay here, he had not been engaged in any Communist activity or been associated in any way with the Red Group. He has a sick mother and eight brothers dependant upon him.

When the defendant was arrested he was found to possess certain documents that proved he was an agent in some political affair.

PRISONERS FREED ON BAIL.

Theft Charges Are Adjudged.

Mr. A. E. Hall appeared before Mr. Wynne-Jones in the Central Police Court yesterday morning for Lok He-mow who had been charged with the theft of a camera valued at $310, and for Chung Che-fun, the alleged thief of a quantity of suit cloth, the property of the Wing On Company.

Both cases were put over until next Wednesday afternoon, Bail, $500 and $100 respectively, was given the defendants.

MR. CECIL NEAVE LAID TO REST.

Many Colleagues Pay Last Respects.

The funeral of Mr. Cecil Neave, who passed away at the French Hospital on Friday night, took place at the Protestant Cemetery, Happy Valley, yesterday evening, in the presence of a large gathering. The Rev. Dr. E. L. Allen, Pastor of the Union Church, Kowloon, conducted the burial rites.

Those present at the graveside included Mr. E. Cock, M.B.E., Acting Chief Manager of the Kowloon Dock, Mr. D. Gow, Chief Clerk, and many other members of the staff. Many wreaths were laid upon the grave.

LIFE'S PRIZES ARE AT AUCTION

MAN MUST KEEP HIS COURAGE TO BID LATENT HUMAN POWER

(By A LOCAL PADRE.)

(This is another of the series of articles written exclusively for the "Sunday Herald" by a local Army chaplain.)

One morning, some years before the war, a group of people had gathered in a small auction shop in a London street, for the advertised sale of fine antiques and curios. One by one various lots were put up and knocked down to the highest bidder.

At last the auctioneer brought out an old blackened and dirty looking violin. As he held it up for all to see, he said, "It is now my great privilege, and honour, to offer to you this genuine Cremona, made by the hands of Antonius Stradivarius himself, the greatest of all the Masters. It does not need any words of mine to tell you how rare it is, and worth its weight in gold. What am I bid?"

The violin passed from hand to hand. The people looked at it very critically. Some doubted the accuracy of the auctioneer's statements, because they saw it did not have the Strad. mark cut in it. He explained that some of the earliest ones did not have the name, and some that had were not genuine.

Still the buyers doubted and criticised, as buyers have always done. The bidding rose to five guineas, and there it stopped. The auctioneer perspired and pleaded, but the bidding rose no higher.

Meanwhile a man had entered the shop from the street. He was very tall and slender, with jet black hair, of middle age, and wearing a velvet cloak. He walked up to the counter with a peculiar sideways step, and without noticing anyone in the shop, picked up the violin, and was at once absorbed in it. Very gently he dusted it with his handkerchief, changed the tension of the strings, and held it to his ear lovingly, as though hearing something. Then putting the end of it in position, he reached for the bow, while the murmur went around the little crowd—"Paginini," one of the greatest players the world has known.

Magic of Music.

The bow seemed hardly to have touched the strings, when a soft exquisite note came out, filling the shop, and holding the people spellbound. As he played, they were transported out of the auction shop into another world. They stood in rapt reverence as he played upon their emotions, as only a master can.

Presently he stopped, and as they were released from the spell of the music, the people began to clamour for the violin. Up went the bidding in hot haste. At last it was knocked down to the famous player himself, and that night he held a vast audience in rapture under the spell of the music he drew out of that old, dirty, and despised violin, despised until the master player took it in hand. Only then was its true worth realised, its rare value, its hidden harmony.

It needed dusting and readjusting of the strings, but when they of Spain, the late Maria Christina, mother of Don Alfonso, ex-King of Spain. They were a present on the occasion of Pope Leo XIII's jubilee, and in the auction shop, and like that were to form part of the exhibition violin. We have been systematically underbidding and under-valuing ourselves, our work, our prospects, our possibilities. Time and again we have stopped bidding at five guineas, because we have failed to realise what lies latent within us, and what we can make of life. We are far too prone, when difficulties arise, to allow ourselves to be overwhelmed by the present view of our misfortunes, and to forget that there is very often a way out, if only we will not lose heart, and keep on bidding up.

Around the Corner.

In our darker moments, when the shadows of life seem to obscure our pathway, we may be inclined to think that nothing very splendid lies ahead, and we feel like throwing our hands in, while just around the next corner, some splendid opportunity may be lying

In wait for us, if we keep bidding on. So often too, we have undervalued the power of our religion, simply because we have stopped bidding at five guineas, and never dared to go all out and give it a fair trial. We have prayed for something, usually something for ourselves, we have not been given it, and we stop. Or we have taken the opinion of others who have also held back. Instead of taking the advice of those who know its real worth and value, tried and proved in their living experience.

We are rather like that violin. Never realised that we are capable of tremendous things, not of ourselves but when the hand of the Master is placed upon us.

Ignorant of Power.

Those first disciples, rough uncouth, uneducated men, never dreamed what they could do, until the hand of the Master touched them, and they followed Him. True they failed often, they were only human, but they lived to become known as men who turned the world upside down, men who laid the foundation of the greatest Empire the world has ever known.

St. Paul, the greatest soldier and servant any cause has ever had, did not know of what he was capable, until the Hand was laid upon him, on the road to Damascus, but from that moment he was a changed man. Many men never realised of what heights of heroism they were capable, in the days of the Great War, until they were touched by the master hand of a great ideal.

What so many of us need to-day, is just an adjustment of our life strings, to bring it into tune. It may be we shall have to loose some of the things we now count dear. We may be called to travel along difficult and trying paths, to test our metal, and bring out the best that is in us. But touched by the workman Hand of Him who was a workman too, there is nothing we dare not tackle and do. Touched by His life-giving Spirit we can face life unafraid.

FORGOTTEN FOR 40 YEARS.

Tapestries In Vatican Garden.

Vatican City, Aug. 10. After lying forgotten for over forty years, two valuable tapestries, believed to have been ordered by King Philip the Good from Pasquier Grenier, of Tournai, in 1450, have been "discovered" rolled up in the Casino of Pius IV, a sort of summer-house in the Vatican gardens.

At first officials were at a loss to say what they were and whence they came; but after some searchings amongst old files it has been decided that the tapestries were sent to the Vatican by the Queen Regent of Spain, the late Maria Christina, mother of Don Alfonso, ex-King of Spain. They were a present on the occasion of Pope Leo XIII's jubilee, and in the auction shop, and like that were to form part of the exhibition violin. We have been systematically underbidding and under-valuing ourselves, our work, our prospects, our possibilities. Time and again we have stopped bidding at five guineas, because we have failed to realise what lies latent within us, and what we can make of life. We are far too prone, when difficulties arise, to allow ourselves to be overwhelmed by the present view of our misfortunes, and to forget that there is very often a way out, if only we will not lose heart, and keep on bidding up.

How they got into the summer-house nobody now can tell. Except that they are covered with dust, they seem to be in good condition. After being cleaned, they will be hung in the new picture gallery, which is to be open to the public in the autumn.

The tapestries illustrate the first article of the Apostles' Creed, and are rich and sombre in colouring.

OPEL INTRODUCES COUPE-SIX.

More Improvements
In Appearance.
GREATER ROOMINESS.

The tendency of the automobile market of the last few years indicates the public's desire for more economical transportation and therefore for smaller cars. Adam Opel has responded to this demand by bringing out the 1.8 and 1.2 liter models, the 1.8 six-cylinder model in 1930 and the 1.2 four-cylinder model in 1931. In order to fulfill the demand of a large percentage of prospective buyers who are accustomed to a standard of comfort so far available only in big cars, Opel has decided to design a new model, the Regent 6 coupe, on the popular 1.8 chassis. In addition to its greater roominess, this new car is distinguished especially by its entirely new lines achieved by the adaptation of Aero dynamic principles. Since Opel's intention, however, is to build a car for every-day use rather than a racing car, this new model does not show such faddish tendencies as are to be found in some of the latest stream line creations on the automobile market.

The new and roomier body in widest in the middle and the sides curve gracefully to a narrower top and bottom. This type of body looks lower and its construction decreases air resistance. The lighter all-steel top also helps to lower the centre of gravity.

Small Refinements.

The head-lamps, tie-bar, radiator-screen and bumpers, as well as the ornamental strip on top of the unique hood design, are all chromium-plated. This together with the stream-lined fenders and the wipers, which are built into the cowl, give the car its special appearance features. The wide doors afford plenty of room to get in and out of the car.

The rear of the car is particularly well stream-lined. The spare-wheel is fitted in a special well in the rear which half encases it. An innovation is the neck of the tank filler which protrudes through the centre of the spare-wheel.

The larger dimensions achieved in the interior are rather remarkable, the increase being about four inches in width as compared with the standard 1.8 L sedan. Great care was taken to provide both comfort and luxury.

The front seats are easily adjusted even while driving, the rear-seats have arm rests and this particular design of construction makes them particularly comfortable. The rear-window and the rear-quarter windows can be opened easily and are exceptionally wide.

The smart instrument board is made of walnut-wood in which a panel with chromium-plated edges has been inserted. On each side of the panel are convenient and roomy glove-compartments. The garnish mouldings are finished in the same colour as the instrument panel. Both doors have oversized pockets. The curtain of the rear-window can be operated from the driver's seat. Practical dome-lights in both rear corners can be used as reading lamps.

Sufficient space provided for luggage and tools is easily accessible by folding forward the back of the rear seats. The shipping weight of the car is 2,145 pounds.

This new Regent 6 coupe is designed to compete with cars in a higher-priced class and it is believed that it will be welcomed by all of the Export operations.

TORQUAY RALLY TALKS

NEW DEVELOPMENTS SEEN IN MOTOR WORLD.

The abolition of the speed limit in England has not resulted in any appreciable increase of the rate of travel on the roads, says a contemporary writing from London.

The constantly increasing number of cars has caused the average speed of travel to be reduced, and the motorist who wishes to get the maximum of enjoyment should resign himself to the fact that he will rarely be able to travel fast, and that his speed must depend entirely on the convenience of other road users, whether on foot or on wheel.

The age of covering the greatest distance, and I must confess I now find that motoring is a far less strenuous and a much more restful occupation than in the past. The enjoyment I get from my driving is proportionately greater.

If there is any possibility of a crowded road I modify my schedule accordingly. In past years I used to set 25 m.p.h. as my minimum average on a long run, but now, days 20 m.p.h. is the modified minimum. Even the driver of a very fast car has the greatest difficulty, without taking risks, in getting ahead of other traffic when the roads are crowded.

Clutch Disc.

If the Torquay Rally did nothing else it drew attention to new developments in transmission. The fluid flywheel, the automatic slipping clutch, the self-changing gear, and the possibilities of the heavy oil engine were all demonstrated.

Manufacturers since then have been busy experimenting, with the result that announcements are made each week as to the latest improvements. The most recent to come to my notice is a new patent clutch disc, known as the Don-Flex. It is claimed that this invention gives most of the advantages of the fluid flywheel, but in a more inexpensive way. Its outstanding features are laminated plates, fabric frictional facings and cork rivets.

Mr. Siddeley Honoured.
"For public services in connection with mechanical development in the Defence Forces," Mr. J. D. Siddeley, chairman and managing director of Armstrong Siddeley Motors, Ltd., has been honoured with a knighthood.

One of the earliest members of the trade, Mr. Siddeley has done much to popularise the motor car, which his services to aviation have been of immense value.

It is not generally known that Mr. Siddeley is mainly responsible for the extremely comfortable and attractive coachwork which is fitted to his latest cars.

Only the other day I had a most enjoyable run on the improved Short Fifteen Armstrong Siddeley. The car is a four speeder with the increasingly popular pre-selective gear. Driving is simplicity itself, and even on a drenched track at Brooklands there was no sense of insecurity or lack of control.

It is particularly in traffic and in hilly country that his car excels, as the acceleration provided by the gearbox enables a performance to be effected out of all proportion to the size of the engine.

The car falls in the two-litre class, but the improvements which have been incorporated would lead one to believe that the engine is larger. Every detail from lubrication to storage of tools, is so worked out that everything is readily accessible.

Road Break-Downs.

BRITISH MOTOR SUPREMACY.

Cars And Drivers On Alpine Trials.

London, Aug. 4.

British cars, driven by British drivers, have gained a remarkable series of successes in the International Alpine six-day motor trial.

The first British win was in the Coupe des Alpes, for cars of 2,000 c.c. This event was captured by a team of Talbot cars.

Then a team of Invictas narrowly defeated an Armstrong-Siddeley team and won the Glacier Cup.

In the race for cars of 1,100 c.c. to 1,500 c.c., all the first three places were filled by British cars, a Fraser-Nash winning the event with two Wolseley cars close behind.

A team of Rileys won the Coupe des Alpes for 500 to 1,100 c.c. cars, while many wins were secured by Landauls, Singers, and Morris cars.

The British successes were gained against very strong opposition, as nearly all the leading Continental cars were represented in the contests.

analyse the causes of road break-downs.

The latest figures are particularly interesting, as they reveal that carburettor and ignition troubles are the chief causes of breakdown. This is somewhat curious, and most cars nowadays are fitted with efficient filters, and the fuel is strained before it is delivered from the pump.

Ignition trouble I can understand, as the electrical equipment of a car is the most complicated and yet the most compact of its components.

With so many cars to-day fitted with coil ignition it is of the greatest importance that every part should be in proper working order. Too frequent use of the starter, horn or lamps will reduce the reserve of the battery and, if much traffic driving is done, it is possible the dynamo will be unable to supply the correct charge.

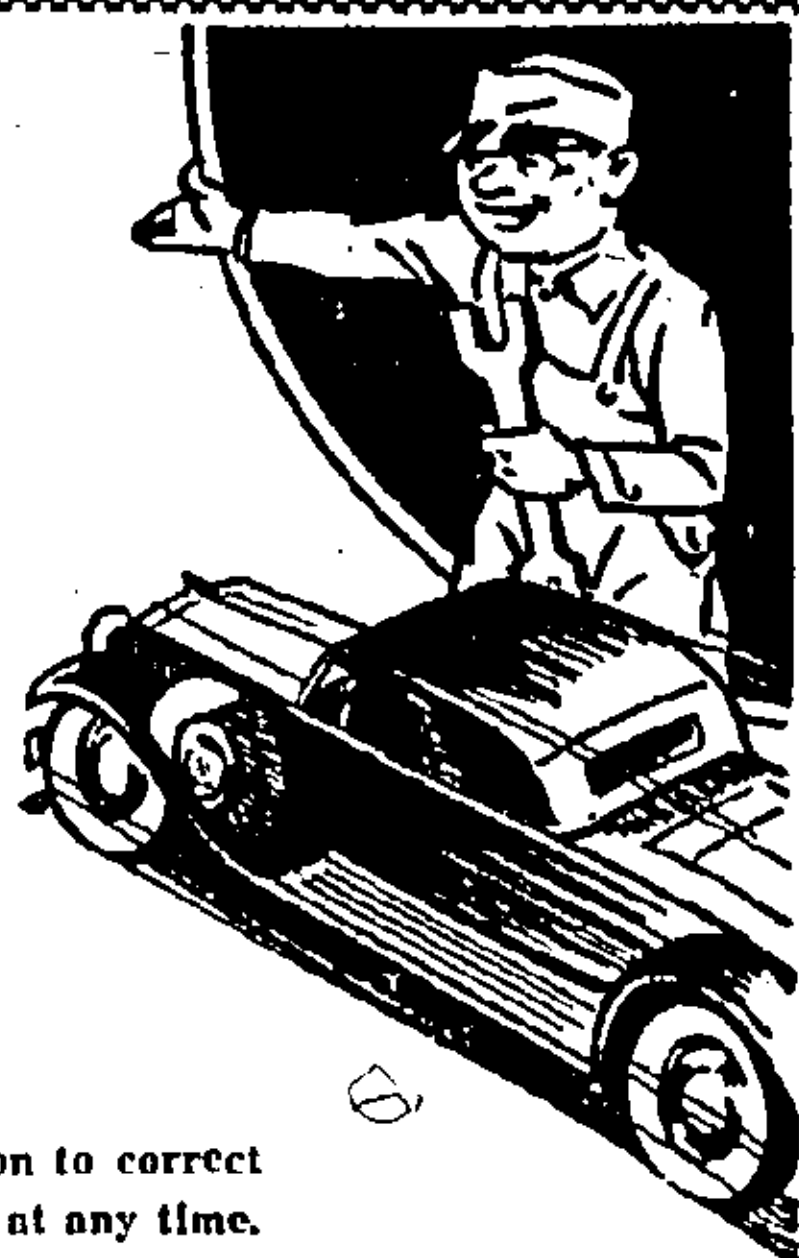

I sometimes wonder why more motorists do not take advantage of periodical inspection schemes. Service stations are very available nowadays, and it is a comparatively simple matter to take the car in, say, once a month, when it can be inspected.

SUCCESSFUL TEST OF
"CUMMINS DIESEL"*60 Miles Per Gallon
At 80 M.P.H.

Among the types of compression ignition engine which have attracted such favourable notice recently is that known as the "Cummins Diesel," with which most successful tests have been made in America. Its designer, Mr. C. L. Cummins, the builder of the compression-ignition engine car which attained a speed of more than 100 m.p.h. at Daytona Beach early last year and which subsequently averaged 86 m.p.h. in the 1931 Indianapolis 500-mile race, recently gave some interesting details in London of his engine.

The outstanding statement was that his 6-cylinder 5000 c.c. unit, at idling speed, only required a volume of fuel oil per cylinder of about half that size of a pin's head. It is stated that the car has been driven at 80 m.p.h. with a fuel consumption of 60 m.p.g. According to Mr. Cummins, the minute quantity of fuel to be injected into each cylinder head to attain full power in even a comparatively large sized cylinder, complicates the application of the "C.I." principle to engines of small capacity.

The problem will be to design fuel injectors capable of calibrating the heavy oil into quantities small enough to supply the needs of, say 1500 c.c. four-cylinder and 2000 c.c. six-cylinder car engines.

However, such great strides have been made in England and Germany in the evolution of efficient fuel injection pumps for "C.I." engines for commercial uses, that the experts who have made much progress in this direction during the last two or three years, may prove that the problem of applying the "C.I." principle to small-sized multi-cylinder engines is one that can be solved.

MOTOR CYCLE OF OLD VINTAGE.*Carries Owner To Midland Rally.

When the annual Midland Rally of the Association of Pioneer Motor Cyclists was held at Stoneleigh Abbey, Warwickshire, last month, one of the most interesting vehicles present was the 32-year old Humberette car on which Mr. Sam Wright, of Coventry, attended. In spite of its age, the veteran was running as well as it did in its youth, and formed a handsome tribute to the quality of material and workmanship which has always been such a feature of the Humber, recent purchasers of which include Her Grace The Duchess of Manchester, who has taken delivery of a Salpe through the Paris Distributors, and C. F. Dormer, Esq., the British Minister at Bangkok, who has recently purchased a Pullman.

The Importance Of Piston Design
Ingenious Methods In Making
"Aerolite's"*ESSENTIALS OF THE UNIT
PERFECT WORKMANSHIP NEEDED IN PRODUCTION.

The importance of the design of pistons and rings to the efficiency and durability of an engine can hardly be over-estimated. These parts conveying the explosive pressure to the connecting rods, must maintain a gas-tight joint and, although working at high speeds and temperatures, must run smoothly and without perceptible slap. To meet these conditions not only must the design be right, but in addition the materials and the manufacturing methods should be of the very best.

Bearing these points in mind, it is not surprising that the works of the Light Production Co., Ltd., at Slough, where Aerolite pistons and Cygnets are made, should display very many features of great interest. It is scarcely necessary to mention that these pistons and rings have become very widely used both by car manufacturers and by firms engaged upon the replacement trade.

Unusual Features.
The Aerolite piston is a clean light-alloy die casting and embodies grooves or flutes which divide the skirt into four parts. Of these, the two which include the gudgeon pin bosses are ground to a somewhat smaller diameter than the other pair, which fit the bore quite closely when the engine is cold. Saw cuts insulate this pair from the crown whereas the faces which include the gudgeon pin bosses are joined to the crown by internal webs.

The result of this arrangement is that as the engine temperature rises heat flows mainly to the two faces at the end of the gudgeon pin, allowing these to expand until their outer diameter under working conditions corresponds with that of the opposite pair of faces.

After various preliminary machining operations, each piston reaches an automatic machine where it is operated upon simultaneously by tools which turn the skirt, face the crown and cut the grooves. Normally there are three of these grooves, two receiving gas-holding rings, while the third is made wider to accommodate a slotted scraper ring. Oil removed from the cylinder walls passes through the slots and then through holes at the bottom of the groove to the interior of the piston.

Another operation of considerable interest is the grinding of the skirt, which is carried out in a special machine with cams that rock the piston to and fro while it is revolving. As a result it is actually ground to an oval shape with one pair of faces of a larger diameter than the opposite pair, as previously explained.

Careful Inspection.
Every gudgeon pin is lapped to a high finish, and is then hand fitted to reamed holes in the bosses, so as to ensure a close fit. The normal arrangement is to fit the pin with Duralumin pads at each end and to allow it to float both in the piston bosses and in the little end of the connecting rod. A close inspection follows all important operations, and is, of course, applied to the individual finished pistons. Dimensions are held to very fine limits; the skirt, for example, must not be more than half a thousandth of an inch above or below the required size.

Piston rings, although apparently more simple than pistons, actually require a larger number of manufacturing operations. They commence life in the form of an iron cylinder, centrifugally cast. This is bored and is externally turned simultaneously to leave a thinner cylinder of absolutely sound metal, which is then divided up into rings by a large number of thin cutting tools.

Great Accuracy.
In various subsequent operations the external circular and flag surfaces of the rings are ground with a high degree of accuracy, after which each is placed in a special machine which automatically hammers the ring inside. The marks of the small hammer can clearly be seen, and if a ring is examined it will be noticed that opposite the gap (but subsequently) the hammer blows are close together and that they become spread out more and more towards the gap. The idea of this is to ensure a proper distribution of the pressure exerted by the ring against the cylinder. It is interesting to notice that as a result of the stressing produced by his hammering the ring jumps open of itself to the required extent when the gap is cut.

"BABY" CARS STILL IN DEMAND.*No Decline Shown
In Orders.*GREAT ECONOMIES.

The British motor trade has not suffered severe loss during the general depression of the last year or two. Motoring in the British Isles is more popular than ever, and there is a steady demand for new models. The English manufacturer has concentrated on cutting prices as low as possible, and on the production of cars which are inexpensive to buy and very economical as regards running costs. Fewer of the more expensive models are being made and sold but, on the other hand, there has been a remarkable increase both in the numbers and varieties of what are now known as "Baby" cars. Some manufacturers have found in these small models a means of financial salvation.

The popularity of the "Baby" cars in Great Britain may be attributed chiefly to the desire for economy. But there are other factors to be considered. The small British car has speed, it is steady on the road and the new silent gears make it quiet; furthermore, it is comfortable and easy to handle. The saving in running costs effected over a 16 horsepower car approximates to about one pound a week. For these reasons, it is believed that this year the small car will pre-dominate in the English home market. As regards export, it is understood that many foreign countries believe that "Baby" cars are unsuitable for their roads. Although the demand for them abroad is increasing, it is not yet nearly as high as one might expect. But, in a period of depression such as that through which the world is now passing, the person who wishes to effect economies in his motoring bill, without loss of efficiency, should study the small British car.

The next problem is to re-grind the external surface so that it will bear truly and evenly upon the walls when the ring is compressed in a cylinder. To effect this a batch of rings is pressed into a sleeve, the diameter of which is arranged to suit the cylinder bore in which they will eventually work. The rings are then clamped together on a mandrel with a grip sufficient to prevent them from springing open when the sleeve is withdrawn; they are then finished on a grinding machine.

Apart from the ordinary inspection by measurement each ring has to pass a very stringent final test in which it is placed within a circular gauge and is revolved in front of a bright electric light. If the ring is truly circular no light will be visible between its surface and that of the gauge at any point.

Vauxhall Known As Practical Car*Earl Of Cardigan Is Full
Of Praises*CERTAIN GEARS*SPEED AND SILENCE ON LONG CRUISES.

The Vauxhall "Cadet" is, I suppose, one of the most completely practical cars that I have ever driven. It was, I take it, designed to meet the needs of the practical man who requires comfortable, trouble-free and economical motoring, and it would certainly be difficult to find a car in which these qualities are more successfully combined, states a recent article by the Earl of Cardigan.

The horse-power for instance, is exactly that which may be relied upon to give a good performance with really substantial and commodious coachwork. The nature of this performance, moreover, is that which the average man is most likely to appreciate. Good acceleration is available at low speeds, and smoothness is maintained at the 40-50 m.p.h. cruising speed which most of us adopt on main-road runs.

The gear-box, again, is more practical than most, since it can be used with advantage by any driver, experienced or otherwise. It includes what is described as a "synchromesh" device, by means of which one pinion is automatically speeded up or slowed down to the speed at which it can be cleanly meshed with another. This is effected by a small clutch which, in the latest models, acts instantaneously and quite silently wherever either second or top gear is engaged.

Certain Gear Change.
A good point is that, outwardly, this gear-box differs in no way from the normal, so that the experienced driver has nothing new to learn. He can, and will, forget that any auxiliary device is fitted. The novice, on the other hand, will find that his most ambitious gear-changes are achieved with absolute certainty and ease. Knowing this he will not hesitate to change down whenever the engine requires it (which will not be often), and thus this three-speed box is likely to prove of more practical use to him than the majority of four-speed units.

The steering is good, and the springing excellent, so that the car always rides easily upon the road. Best of all, in my opinion, is the braking system—a fact for which I was not unprepared. The many Vauxhall models I have driven in recent years, varying in other ways, have in one respect been remarkably consistent in the efficiency, and in the light smooth, progressive action of their brakes.

The saloon coachwork is good-looking, comfortable and roomy. It is designed to seat four, and is quite well able to accommodate four large twelve-stone, six-foot adults. If the passengers are slim, three can sit abreast on the back seat, the armrests of which are specially recessed. A substantial luggage-grid is a standard fitting, and the tools are carried, free from rust and dirt, in a locker just behind the engine.

NEW LIGHT EIGHT
PACKARD.*Small Differences From Old Model.

A new model Packard, known as the Light Eight, has recently arrived in Britain.

The intention has been to produce a car at a lower price than previous types while still preserving the quality and performance for which this high-grade American make is famous.

Mechanically, and except for the latest type of gear box, the car does not differ in any marked respects from its predecessors, which, it may be mentioned, are continued. The engine size is the same, there being eight cylinders in line, with a bore and stroke of 81 x 127 mm., equivalent to a capacity of rather more than 5½ litres, and calling for a tax of £33. The wheelbase is 10ft. 7¾in., but a material saving of weight has been effected by careful redesigning, in spite of which the chassis itself appears to be an even more rigid construction than before, there being a stout X cross-member to brace the frame sides.—"The Autocar."

MAYBACH'S STREAM-LINE CAR.*Body Developed By Tunnel Tests.

A very interesting streamline body has been evolved by the Maybach concern for their six and 12-cylinder chassis. The form has been developed with the aid of numerous wind-tunnel tests, and as far as possible in keeping with aerodynamical requirements without detracting from good appearance.

All projecting parts are avoided and even the headlights have been included in the streamline box surrounding the wheels. The slanting radiator is shaped as a concave air scoop merging at the sides into the aprons connecting it with the wheelboxes so that when the car is travelling at high speed the radiator and aprons scoop up the ground air, thus avoiding, to a certain degree, the formation of air eddies underneath. The spare wheels are housed in lockers placed behind the front wheels.

Ample Luggage Space.
Ample luggage space is provided over the rear axle, the locker being accessible through two large doors in the slanting rear quarters. A sliding door is fitted, and the vertically divided windshield, the halves of which meet at a slight angle, is in a slanting position. The door handles are recessed, and a special feature is that the locking of the doors automatically also locks the bonnet and spare wheels and luggage lockers.

The interior of the car is exceptionally spacious, and on a ledge behind the rear seats there is ample room for small articles such as gloves, handbags, umbrellas and hats.

NEW USES FOR COLOUR.

Use of colour is gradually extending in American motor fields, and coloured tyre casings are occasionally seen. Then, too, there is a move to paint the surfaces of the roads in the United States, and experimental strips of restful green have been painted to determine whether this is a real improvement or a fad. The effect of a paint finish over the radiator shell is, of course, another direction in which experiments have been made.—"The Autocar."

BRITAIN CAPTURES NEW ZEALAND TRADE.

The motor trade in New Zealand has swung completely away from the American to the British car. Singer and Co., Ltd., point out that from 1928 to 1931 Singer cars were the only models which, according to registration figures, in each successive year showed increases on the preceding year in the New Zealand market in competition with all other makes.

A PERFECT ENTERTAINMENT

READ WHAT THE CRITICS SAY:

"I'm a little tired of American children, so I might not have liked 'When A Fellow Needs A Friend' as well as I did if Jackie Cooper had not been the 'leading man.' There's something uncanny in the way young Jackie assumes that inferiority complex and in the intensity of his acting."

—EVENING NEWS.

"Jackie Cooper gives a masterly performance as the invalid boy and wrings every drop of sentiment out of the part in a way which commands admiration."

—THE STAR.

"A simple human story . . . Jackie Cooper again dominates the whole show."

—DAILY SKETCH.

READ WHAT THE CRITICS SAY:

"I've not been in the 'Empire' since the first show, but I should imagine that the entire auditorium is swimming in happy tears. Young Jackie is a really marvellous actor for his age. He cries like a human boy, and to say that is to pay him the supreme tribute."

—DAILY EXPRESS

"There is no doubt that Jackie Cooper is the most talented of boy actors."

—NEWS CHRONICLE.

"There are no audiences to whom this skilful mixture of humour and pathos would not appeal."

—SUNDAY CHRONICLE.

Newly discovered! a priceless safeguard to teeth

—an entirely new cleansing and polishing material has been developed that is twice as soft as polishing materials commonly used in tooth pastes. Gives teeth a higher polish, brighter lustre—FILM stains disappear completely.

THE Pepsodent Laboratories announce a revolutionary discovery—a new cleansing and polishing material for tooth paste. For six months Pepsodent Tooth Paste has contained this remarkable new material. It possesses three exclusive virtues:

1. It stands unexcelled in removing dull, destructive FILM.
2. Its texture is invisibly fine. Thus, it imparts a higher polish to enamel—a brilliant gloss or lustre.
3. It is safe because it is soft—yes, twice as soft—as polishing materials in common use.

Yet in taste and appearance Pepsodent is still the Pepsodent you have always known. In results and safety it is new—brand new.

Pepsodent—special FILM-removing tooth paste

Removing FILM is, and always will be, Pepsodent's chief duty. Today's Pepsodent performs that duty better than ever before. Its new cleansing and polishing material brings a change in teeth's appearance within a few days' time.

Get a tube of Pepsodent today. See how quickly and safely it rids your teeth of decay-producing film—how it polishes them to sparkling brilliance.

RKO PATHE presents

ANN HARDING DEVOTION

ANN HARDING'S HOTTEST FILM.

Enthusiasm and curses are present in almost equal parts in Ann Harding's attitude toward "Devotion," in which she is now being starred by RKO and which is showing at the Central Theatre to-day.

The enthusiasm is caused by the story which the blonde star happily approved. In fact, it was upon Miss Harding's own urging that RKO executives became interested in "A Little Flat in the Temple," the novel by Pamela Wynne on which it is based. The whimsical comedy and Barresque lightness of the story appealed as thoroughly to Ann that she felt she could not be happy until she has brought it to the screen.

However every rose has its prickly addenda. The thorn in this case, according to Miss Harding is the fact that the picture was made in the midst of one of the California's hottest spells of unusual weather.

Since she represents a young girl masquerading as a middle-aged nurse to be near the man she loves Miss Harding was obliged to wear heavy garments of bombazine and during a certain portion of the story. Her feet were encased in the heaviest of sensible progress. And of course the hot incandescence did nothing to render the star more comfortable.

Robert Milton directed Miss Harding in "Devotion," in which Leslie Howard and Robert Williams share leading man honours. Among the notable "Kee" are Doris Lloyd, George E. Stone, Constance Tover, Harry Doolittle and others.

BELIEVE IT OR NOT—

Chevrolet pistons move at the low rate of only 1,880 feet per car mile.

Whenever metal parts move, one upon the other, there is friction in some degree. That is inevitable. Wear is always taking place in the cylinders where the pistons and rings move against the cylinder walls. This friction is minimized by adequate lubrication but can never be entirely eliminated. In the Chevrolet design, with its low speed, short stroke engine, piston travel is quite low, being only 1,880 feet per car mile, compared with 1,941 feet and 2,514 feet for its nearest competitors.

CHENG'S JUDGMENT ON MONDAY Full Court To Give Decision On Law. SENSATIONAL HEARING.

The decision of the Full Court on the reserved points of law in the Village Road Murder Trial will be delivered on Monday morning at 10 a.m.

The judgment, which is a lengthy one, will be read by the Chief Justice, Sir Joseph Kemp, K.C., but the accused's counsel, Mr. Eldon Foster, K.C., and Mr. F. C. Jenkin, K.C., will not attend the Court as they are both absent from the Colony on vacation.

The reading of the judgment will bring to a close here one of the most sensational cases ever heard in Hong Kong. Chong Kwok-yau, the prisoner, was found guilty of procuring the murder of George Fung, at Village Road, on the night of March 24 this year. An appeal on certain points of law was sought and counsel for the defence argued to upset the judgment.

ROYAL FAMILY AT BALMORAL.

Sir Samuel Hoare To Be Guest Of Royalty.

London, To-day.

Prince George who returned from Biarritz by air on Thursday left by the night train for Scotland. He arrived at Aberdeen this morning where he made a private tour of factories and works, and later proceeded to Balmoral where their Majesties the King and Queen are in residence.

The Secretary for India, Sir Samuel Hoare, who will be the guest of their Majesties for a few days, will fly to Balmoral from his home in Norfolk on Monday—British Wireless Service.
